THE ORATOR DEAD.

Judge Ellett Suddenly Dies After Welcoming the President to the City of Memphis.

Overcome by the Heat the Distinguished Gentleman Falls on the Stand and Expires.

The Shocking Incident Kept From the Knowledge of the President During the Reception.

The Engineer of the Presidential Train Discovers a Burning Bridge During the Trip.

The Ceremonies at Memphis Concluded, the Party Starts on Its Way to Nashville.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 15.—Judge H. T. Ellett, who made the welcoming address to the President, died on the stand before the ceremonies were over.

This most unfortunate occurrence interrupted the formalities of the occasion, just as the President closed his remarks.

Though the day was not uncomfortably warm, the spot was an exposed one, and Judge Ellett, who stood for a time with his hat off as the President was speaking, sat down and was overcome by the heat.

Dr. Bryant, of the presidential party, took direction of affairs and remained with the unfortunate gentleman while the President was escorted to the Cotton & Merchants' exchange.

Judge Ellett died five minutes after the President left the receiving stand. The fact has so far been kept from the President.

Judge Ellett was about 55 years of age, and was widely known as a lawyer of ability.

A Bridge Discovered on Fire.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 15.—When the pilot train, preceding the Presidential train, arrived at the trestle between Bonnerville and Jonesboro, Ark., yesterday morning, the engineer discovered the trestle to be on fire. He did not make the discovery until it was too late to stop the train before the engine had passed over the burning portion. As soon as possible he backed off the trestle and jumped down to examine the fire. He found that a section about ten feet square was in flames and that the fire had been started on the under side of the timbers. The engineer and all the rest of the trainmen, with the help of some of the passengers, succeeded in putting out the fire, when it was discovered that the flames had not eaten dangerously far into the wood and that the trestle was still safe for the passage of trains. A careful examination of the burned timbers [illegible] unmistakable evidence of an attempt at [illegible] wrecking. The fire was started on the under side of the cross ties in such a manner that there can be no possible belief that sparks were the cause of it. Then, too, the fire was certainly set to more than one tie at a time, for it could not have jumped from one to another without burning the sides of the timber more than it did. The conclusion is almost irresistible that somebody had applied a torch to at least eight or nine of the timbers.

Welcomed to Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 15.—This morning the comm[illegible] promptly on hand, but the late ho[illegible] night caused delay in starting the pr[illegible]sion of carriages and again upset the committee's arrangements. The procession, headed by a band and military, moved from the hotel at a quarter before 10 o'clock. Twice along the line of march beautiful bouquets of flowers in antique designs were lowered into the President's carriage. Twice as many people as were ever seen in the town before were upon the streets. A large stand in the centre of Court square was reached by the President about half past ten and the formalities of the reception were begun.

The formal speech of welcome was delivered by Judge H. T. Ellett, of the chancery court.

"You have recently participated," he said, "in a celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the formation of the constitution of the United States. Let me say, sir, that the southern heart was in full sympathy with this interesting occasion and that nowhere in all this broad land will you find more loyalty to the constitution of the United States and to the government created by it, than among the people of these southern states. Differences of opinion as to its true theory and its proper construction in some points existed from its very creation, and the controversy has often been angry and bitter. One great and important interest in the progress of things became sectionalized, and out of it arose questions of constitutional interpretation which were regarded by the southern people as so vital to their rights and interests that they committed their solution to the arbitration of arms, but, Mr. President, they have bowed to the stern logic of events, and they have in a frank and manly way accepted the result of the struggle as the final settlement of all questions in dispute, and they have since labored with rare courage, fortitude and cheerfulness, to accommodate themselves to their new conditions, to reconstruct their broken fortunes and to contribute as far as possible to the general prosperity and happiness of the whole country.

"As one practical result accomplished by the conflict the theory of the right of the state to withdraw from the federal compact was [illegible] [illegible]rown, and the indestructibility of [illegible] American Union was established on the firmest foundations. The chief [illegible]ment of discord has been removed forever [illegible]d though questions will continue to arise [illegible]bout which men may differ earnestly, it is settled beyond appeal that for all abuses and grievances that may arise from the action of the general government redress must hereafter be brought within the pale of the Union and under the forms of established law.

"Heretofore presidential progresses have been without the grace and charm offered by female [illegible]ence and influence. We all rejoice that you a[illegible] accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland, and on behalf of the ladies of Memphis I beg you to present to her their cordial and [illegible]spectful salutations."

The President replied as follows:

"The city of Memphis represents neither a new settlement nor a recent municipal creation. She has a long history, full of vicissitude and discouraging incidents. Now the largest city in Tennessee, her growth has illustrated the universal push and activity of the American people. I have come from sight-seeing in the wonderful west, to be still surprised in the south. From a marvelous growth, I have come to see not only a marvelous growth but an astonishing recuperation. The active trade upon your streets and in your exchanges tells one the tale of one of the largest cotton marts in the world and one of the most prosperous and flourishing cities of the South. Scarcely a trace is seen of the trials and discouragements through which it passed in gaining its present position, and yet when it had in 1862 by steady growth reached a population of 30,000, it was occupied by a military force and for four years thereafter was held as a fortified camp. During this time the people were scattered and its growth checked. When, at the close of the war, its citizens returned to their homes they courageously set about repairing the damage of the war and military occupation. Although within ten years thereafter twice was this city afflicted with yellow fever, yet, even through these visitations, [illegible] people struggled on, determined to over[illegible]. In 1878, when once more apparently on the high road to permanent prosperity, this devoted city was again visited by its dreadful scourge in a more malignant form than ever before. No one can wonder that in the renewed presence of this dire calamity its suffering citizens fled for their lives. Of the population, which through all discouragements had reached 40,000, but about 20,000 remained and of these fully 5,000 died of the terrible epidemic in two and a half months.

In this sombre picture let us contemplate a moment one bright spot lighted u[illegible] a spirit of brotherly love and illuminated by the [illegible]dly sympathy of a generous nation. From [illegible] parts of the country, near and distant, from [illegible] North and from the South, came prompt and [illegible]erful help, supplying the needs and alleviat[illegible] the distress. Our whole people were touched [illegible] your suffering and the noblest traits of our [illegible]ional character were quickened by [illegible] calamity. When pestilence, ex[illegible]sted by its virulence, abandoned [illegible] the people returned to find their flourish[illegible] business gone and the value of their prop[illegible] destroyed. With undiminished confidence [illegible] the future of their city, they submitted to [illegible]mous taxation for the improvement of its [illegible]tary condition and labored on to regain [illegible] fortunes. They soon secured a system of [illegible]age that not only promised them protec[illegible] against pestilence, but which became [illegible] throughout all the cities of the cou[illegible] [illegible] completeness.

[illegible]er extensive improvements were also [illegible] and soon the citizens of [illegible] again saw their city, with wonderfu[illegible] [illegible] on to municipal greatness and [illegible] [illegible]ation it is estimated, now [illegible]000. The merchants of [illegible] their hands during the [illegible] 700,000 bales of cotton [illegible] The annual product of [illegible] mills is the largest [illegible]nking capital and busi[illegible] [illegible]er immense industries, while the value of real estate in the city has nearly or quite trebled since 1878.

"Thus have you conquered at last and overcome the ravages of war and pestilence. You may well forget all former afflictions in the growth and prosperity of the present, remembering only that in your direst extremity proof was given of the brotherhood of the American people.

"The patriotic sentiment expressed on your behalf by your honored fellow citizens in his address of welcome, I am sure I may say will be generously responded to by your countrymen in the North. They want, I believe, a rest from sectional bitterness and they know that the destiny of our country [illegible] only to be achieved by a true union of sen[illegible]nt and feeling as well as in name. The business interests of our people are too alert and intelligent to be sacrificed or injured by selfish appeals to passion which should be allayed. They only insist that all the results of the arbitrament of arms to which reference here has been made, shall be fully sustained and enforced.

"There flows past your city our nation's great river, which you rightfully regard as a most important factor in your present and future welfare, and which, I believe, is universally recognized as the proper subject of government protection and improvement. To Memphis and every other city on its banks the improvement of this vast highway of commerce is so essential that they should be interested in having this and other proper work of the same description considered upon their merits and freed from schemes sometimes questionable in their character and often extravagant in their demands.

"I desire to return to the kind citizens of Memphis and its neighborhood my thanks for their cordial greetings, with the wish that hereafter nothing but prosperity will follow their activity and enterprise."

The presidential reception to the public in the hall of the cotton exchange continued for about an hour. The President and Mrs. Cleveland were assisted by Postmaster General and Mrs. Vilas. From the exchange the party was escorted to its train at the foot of Court street and at 1 o'clock left for Nashville.

THE JOURNEY TO MEMPHIS.

Novel Experiences and Sights—Tennessee's Tumultuous Reception.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 15.—The floral trophies of yesterday forenoon's ride were one little bunch of goldenrod pinned in a piece of pink-tinted paper inscribed, "For the President and his wife." It was handed to the President by a tow-headed miss of 13 at a water tank stopping place.

The President was handed a quaint invitation at Hoxie, to stop at Marked Tree, Ark. The note was signed "Dave Hawkins," and promised a hearty and novel reception, representing the wild west, which it is said would be an enjoyable change from the grand parades with music which had been his experience thus far. "Bill West," the letter continued, "is hustling to get all his hunting equipments to make a display to meet your observation. If the train does not stop at our station please let us have a glimpse of you, for presidents seldom come through these parts." Marked Tree proved to be a fraud. A wooden station house, a half dozen shanties, a bridge and a score of open-mouthed natives were the only signs of inhabitancy, and neither Dave Hawkins nor Bill West were recognized.

The first sign of the approach to Memphis was the appearance on the train—no one knew how they got there—of handsome lithographs of the President and Mrs. Cleveland, the allegorical bordering of which contained figures in the c[illegible] of the ancient Egyptian Memphis, [illegible]sentations of the industries of the [illegible]amesake. Later bouquets of flowers, [illegible]ed by snowy cotton balls, made their [illegible]nce on Mrs. Cleveland's table.

[illegible] train reached West Memphis at 2:40 p. [illegible] a delegation of half a dozen gentlemen [illegible] the cars as they came to a stop and in[illegible]y conveyed to the excursionists the [illegible]gs of the several committees formed to do [illegible]nors of the city and invited them on [illegible] the steamer Kate Adams, which lay moored close at hand. Upon the steamer they were welcomed by about 200 leading citizens—members of the executive, reception and entertainment committees. The Chickasaw guards and Memphis merchant zouaves, with a band, were present for escort duty. The Adams cast off her line and to the music of an artillery salute, fired from the levee on the east side, steamed up past the city, the band playing and the people along the shore cheering and waving their hats and handkerchiefs. The vessel went about three miles up the stream, to give the President an opportunity to see the work of river improvement there in progress, and, turning, came back to the custom house, where the distinguished guests were landed.

Up to this time the utmost order had prevailed among the 30,000 people upon the levee, but when the President and Mrs. Cleveland had been seated in their carriage the throngs in their enthusiasm broke over all bounds, carrying away the colored militia guards stationed to keep the way open, and followed on behind the presidential carriage, and the progress to the hotel was by no means the orderly proceeding it was designed to be. A miscellaneous procession of trucks, market wagons, and 10,000 negroes mixed up with the carriages of the committees and the guests. The city was handsomely dressed in bunting and flags and several mammoth arches spanned her chief thoroughfares. One of the most striking of these was made almost entirely of bales of cotton.

At 8 o'clock a committee of nearly 200 ladies and gentlemen in evening dress assembled in the corridors of the hotel, to escort the President and his party in carriages to see the fireworks. Here, again, a great deal of confusion ensued, the President and Mrs. Cleveland being well cared for, but the remaining members of the party being to some extent left to shift for themselves.

Returning to the hotel the President and Mrs. Cleveland, at 9 o'clock, held a reception which was attended by 2,000 or 3,000 ladies and gentlemen invited by the committee [illegible] arrangements.

At 11 o'clock the Jacksonian Dem[illegible]ratic club serenaded President and Mrs. Cleveland.

After the band had played a few selections the president of the club addressed the President of the United States, briefly greeting him in the name of the club and saying that his reception was not in any sense a political one, but that all parties welcomed him. President Cleveland in reply said he had been very much impressed throughout his entire trip thus far by the cordial welcome he had received everywhere irrespective of party, creed or color. At this late hour it would not be expected that he would make any extended remarks. Accepting this cordial welcome as another evidence of the boundless hospitality of the city of Memphis, he bade the club good night.

The band played "Dixie" and the serenaders went home. The President retired at midnight.

A Powder Explosion.

MOUNTAIN GROVE, Mo., Oct. 15.—While enthusiastic Democrats were firing anvils early this morning to announce the approach of the President's train, a glass jar of powder in the hands of Newton Ethridge caught fire and exploded. Ethridge and Charles Young were cut about the face and throat by the glass and the hair on the heads of both was burned off. Ethridge is badly, if not fatally injured.

In the Interest of Foreign Missions.

The Des Moines branch of the Woman's Foreign Mission society of the M. E. church held its fourth annual meeting last night in the Grand Avenue Methodist church. A large audience was in attendance. An address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Mary Knotts, of Kansas City, and the response was made by Mrs. M. W. Powers, corresponding secretary of the Iowa conference. Then came an address on foreign missionary work in the church by Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, pastor of the Grand Avenue M. E. church. The meetings will continue daily until next Tuesday night.

At the meeting this morning committees on publication, resolutions, constitution and by-laws, missionary candidates and sale of literature were appointed. The treasurer's report showed that the amount raised during the year was $11,590.24, an increase of $1,751.78. Dinner was served in the basement of the church.

Police Big Heads Measured.

Police Secretary Huckett has [illegible]warded the names of the officers and the sizes of their headgear to the New York firm which has the contract for furnishing their winter helmets. The new helmets will arrive about November 1. The contract was let to an Eastern firm because the style required could not be procured in Kansas City. The sizes range from 6⅞ to 7¾. There are four men who wear the former size, and only one the latter. The man who has the distinction of having the biggest head of any man connected with the department is Patrolman G. W. Silvers. Officer Halligan, who is noted for having the biggest fists and feet, wears a 7⅝ hat.

Three Small Fires This Morning.

A. Saunders's two story frame house at the corner of Second and Holmes streets was damaged $100 worth by fire at 11 o'clock this morning.

At about the same time a barn at Tenth and Troost, owned by G. Y. Hydes, of Lexington, was burned down. Lewis Porter, a colored man, lived in the barn. His 3-year-old child was alone in the barn and was rescued with difficulty.

Elder Stewart's frame house, 910 Troost avenue, was set on fire by a spark from the burning barn and slightly damaged.

Meeting of the Press Club.

There will be a regular meeting of the Press club, at the club house, Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. In the evening there will be an informal gathering of the members, and refreshments will be served. Music will be furnished by the orchestra of "Her Atonement" company. All active and honorary members of the organization are expected to be present. The club cafe is now open, and meals will be served at all hours.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. French leave for California Monday morning.

Mr. James Jackson, jr., whose home is in Lockport, New York, but who passes his winters in Washington, and is a friend of President Cleveland, is at the Hotel Woodland. Mr. Jackson came here with the presidential party. He is the gentleman referred to by the President wh[illegible] he said in his custom house speech: "This reminds me of a friend who lately made a trip to t[illegible] Pacific coast, and, on returning, found hi[illegible] to Kansas City and bought a lot here. He[illegible]t immediately home, and on reaching hom[illegible] and that his lot had been sold for a price so [illegible] in advance that it paid the entire expenses of his travels across the continent."

THE TRIAL OF CLARKIN.

The Charge Lessened to Manslaughter—Effort to Quash the Indictment.

The trial of Henry Clarkin for the murder of Moses Freeman was resumed to-day in the criminal court. Dr. John Stark, the physician who attended Freeman, was the first witness called. He testified that he could not tell exactly what caused Freeman's death, but in all probability it was due to the assault with the beer glass. Chief Speers testified that he examined Freeman's head at the house of Mrs. Hune, and found only a few scalp wounds. There were very few blood stains. He had been on the police force for seventeen years, and had seen hundreds of men with injuries more serious than Freeman's who came out all right. Judge White at this point said: "Thus far the testimony elicited does not establish a case of murder in any of the degrees. If the state's attorney is willing, I will allow the trial to be continued under the charge of manslaughter, as under this charge I instruct the jury." Major Woodson assented and the trial proceeded. A peculiar question was raised by the testimony of S. Shaffer, who said he knew Freeman well, and that he came from Manchester, England, and his name was Marcus Freeman and not Moses Freeman. Major Warner then asked Judge White for leave to quash the indictment on account of variance between the proof and the indictment. A number of witnesses were called by Major Woodson who testified that the dead man had been known as Moses Freeman in this country, and that letters of administration were made out in that name. At 12 o'clock the state rested this case. This afternoon testimony for the defense will be taken.

Henry Clarkin testified this afternoon in his own behalf, that he struck Freeman with a beer glass because he saw him draw his h[illegible]nd back and thought he was going to shoot him.

ROACH IS EXAMINED.

Justice Worthen Listens to Evidence Against the Alleged Slayer of J. A. Shaw.

The preliminary examination of W. J. Roach, charged with murdering J. A. Shaw on the evening of September 20, was begun at 10 o'clock this morning before Justice Worthen. Several witnesses were examined. The testimony up to noon, when court adjourned, was very strong against Roach.

Shaw was 48 years of age and lived at Slater Mo. He was a conductor on the Chicago & Alton road. Roach was employed as a switchman on the same road. About 7 o'clock on the evening of September 20 they met at the corner of Twelfth and Santa Fe streets, West Kansas. James B. Gardiner was with Shaw. His story of what followed is this: Roach called Shaw a vile name and followed it up by striking him. Gardiner went to Shaw's defense, and Roach pulled a revolver. He fired one shot at Gardiner, which missed him. He then shot at Shaw. The bullet entered the latter's breast. He lived about ten hours. The reason offered for the attack is that Shaw put Roach off his train at one time when the latter was trying to steal a ride.

Roach's statement, made to a STAR reporter after the shooting, was that Shaw and Gardiner assaulted him without any provocation, and that he shot to defend himself.

A Distinction Between Fast and Careless Driving.

R. M. Newcomb, a hack driver, drove down Walnut st[illegible] last evening at a high rate of speed. The street was crowded with people and vehicles but all got out of his way. At Fifth street he was stopped by a policeman, who arrested him on a charge of careless driving. The case was tried in the police court this morning. The ordinance provides that to be convicted of careless driving a driver should have been the cause of a collision. As Newcomb's hack had not come in contact with any another vehicle, he was discharged. The recorder said that if the charge had been one of fast driving, Newcomb would have been convicted.

Mrs. Day Given Bail.

Mrs. Lucinda Day, the wealthiest colored woman in this city, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Wyne to-day, on the charge of sending an obscene letter to a Mrs. Hamlin. Mrs. Day waived examination and was bound over in the sum of $1,300 to await the action of the United States district court.

CITY NEWS CONDENSED.

Yesterday's internal revenue collections amounted to $6,821,23.

The barn of W. P. Johnson, 916 Tracy avenue, was slightly damaged by fire at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

In police court this morning Mrs. Nellie Savage was fined $250 for keeping a disreputable house at 564 Oak street. She appealed to the criminal court.

A motion to quash information in the case of the state against Samuel J. Grubb was made to-day. Grubb is charged with selling glandered and broken down horses by means of artificial devices.

To-day Martin O'Donnel walked all the way from Fifth and Delaware to the Kansas City, Kas., police station to deliver himself up for getting drunk.

C. H. Hall, who lives at 703 Main street, was arrested this morning on a warrant sworn o[illegible] in Justice Holt's court by his wife, charging h[illegible] with disturbing her peace and tranquility.

Thomas Winn, Elijah Merrett and Lee Barrett were arrested last evening by Railroad Policemen Jenkins and Havener for stealing copper from railroad cars in West Kansas. Winn and Merrett were colored and Barrett white.

"YOU BET" REACHES 2:09½

THE GALLANT MARE BEATS 2:10 ON THE FOURTH TRIAL.

Her Successful Performance Greeted With Cheers—A Kansas City Horse Wins the 2:24 Trotting Race—A Lawrence Mare Dies on the Track.

At 3:05 this afternoon You Bet beat her record of 2:10. The mare was in splendid condition and the running mate was in good trim. The quarter was made in 33 seconds, the half in 1:04, the three-fourth mile in 1:34½, and the mile in 2:09½.

When the time was announced the mare and driver received cheers from both the audience and the judges. This is the fourth trial You Bet has had on the new track.

"It is the best track in America," was the remark when Rosalind Wilkes had taken first money, and beat her record in 2:18¾, yesterday afternoon. Splan McCarthy and others agreed with him, and when Mike Wilkes beat Argyle and other fast pacers in 2:16½, 2:18½ and 2:16½, Rohrbeck became so enthusiastic and excited that he could not stand still long enough to write a telegram.

The unfinished 2:18 trotting race was completed yesterday. In the third heat everybody got away on even terms. It was a race between Rosalind Wilkes and J. Q. to the stretch, with the former slightly in the lead. Hogan's driver applied the whip when nearing the wire, and came in second, after an exciting finish; Wilkes first, Hogan second, J. Q. third and Elmwood Chief fourth. Time, 2:18½. The fourth heat was almost a repetition of the third, with the exception that Elmwood Chief was third and J. Q. fourth. Time, 2:20¾.

Mike Wilkes won every heat but the second in the free for all pace. In the second heat he was ahead to the stretch, where Splan closed an immense gap with Argyle, and made the mile in the phenomenally fast time of 2:14¾. Time of first heat 2:16½, second 2:14¾, third, 2:18½, fourth 2:16½.

There was not much interest manifested in the 2:24 pacing race. A field of ten horses started, and no good starts were made. Fred W. was entered, and as on Wednesday he won the three straight heats with hands down; George Woods second and Monkey Rolla third. Time, 2:21. 2:19½, 2:23¾.

Belle Davis, a mare owned at Lawrence, Kas., fell dead at the close of the first heat in the 2:24 pacing contest. The mare went under the wire well up, but had not yet passed the grand stand when she dropped dead.

The running mate Evergreen could not keep up with the mare You Bet yesterday, and the mile could not be made in less than 2:10½. You Bet was in condition to make the circuit in 2:09 but had to do too much of the work to complete the task.

Warsign had a walk away for the Kansas City cup, and come in on the second mile ahead of Panola, who was just ahead of Del Norte, with Pickwick last.

Only one heat in the 2:32 trot was made and eleven horses, among them a number of green ones, started. Cypress closed in on Daisy Wilkes, who led the string to the stretch but only managed to come in second, Edgar A, third, Kit Clover, fourth.

The premiums to the exhibitors of farming implements, fruits, flowers and plants were awarded yesterday.

The judges tried to transact a two days' business, to-day, but did not succeed, and the awarding of premiums will be continued on Monday. This morning awards were given to short horn cattle, saddle horses and light drivers.

John Splan, the well known owner of a string of famous trotters and pacers, said, to-day, that the Kansas City track was the only one in the country on which Jay-Eye-See could expect to lower his record and that the noted trotter from Racine would probably be in Kansas City next year.

Upon the sixth attempt of the first heat in the postponed 2:32 trotting race, this afternoon, the horses were allowed to start. Country Boy could not retain the lead that he held to the last turn and was passed by Kit Clover, who came under the wire a neck ahead of Cypress, who was a length in front of Daisy Wilkes. Time, 2:27½.

In the third heat of the 2:30 trotting race, Kit Clover took the lead. At the half mile pole he went off his feet but regained his former position at the opening of the stretch and won by a length. A good finish was made for second place, Cypress winning by a head, Country Boy third. Time, 2:25¾.

White Stocking, Kansas City horse, was considerable of a favorite on the outside in the 2:24 trotting race. The start was made after the fifth trial and Norman Medium went to the front at the quarter. He held this position for a mile, closely followed by White Stocking and Willie D. Down the stretch White Stocking passed Medium and went under the wire in front of Pharo, who closed a big gap in the stretch and came in second, followed by Norman Medium, third. Time, 2:23.

Norman Medium was two lengths ahead in the second heat and White Stocking was second. Their positions remained the same at the half. As they entered the stretch White Stocking was still two lengths behind. Without any exertion, seemingly, he closed the gap and won the race by a nose, Normon Medium second and Pharo third. Time, 2:22½.

It was no trouble for Kit Clover to win the last heat and the race in the 2:32 class. Modjeska was second and Edgar third, Time, 2:26½. Clover took first money, Cypress second, Daisy Wilkes third and Modjeska fourth money.

With a strong wind blowing at 3:40, Harry Wilkes trotted a mile in 2:15½. The quarter was made in 35 seconds, the half mile in 1:08¼, and the three-quarter pole in 1:41. Wilkes goes to Dallas, Tex., to-morrow night.

R. J. Stewart's Kansas City horse, White Stocking, won the last heat and the race of the 2:24 trot. Norman Medium, second: Wilkes D., third; time 2:24.

THIRTEEN THIEVES PHOTOGRAPHED

Before They Knew It—A Novel Device at Police Headquarters.

Chief Speers sat at his desk in the old city hall this morning. In front of him was seated Harry Wilson, one of the most expert thieves in the country. Wilson's gaze was fixed attentively on what appeared to be the mouth-piece of a speaking tube projecting from the wall in front of him. The chief laughed as the thief suddenly turned pale, jumped out of his chair and exclaimed. "Chief Speers, you've got my photograph this time, but you'll never get it again."

"Once is enough," said the chief quietly. He then opened the door and told Wilson he could go.

A contrivance to take the photographs of thieves has long been needed in the Kansas City police department, but was only secured a few days ago. The instrument is located in a closet in the office of Secretary Taylor. A hole was cut in the wall separating the closet from Chief Speer's office and the tube of the camera inserted. Mr. Taylor acts as photographer, and the plan is working to perfection. The person whose picture is desired is told to sit in a chair directly opposite the tube, which, to the uninitiated, has the appearance of a mouthpiece. While the photographer is working the chief relates his California experience to entertain the victim.

In this manner the photographs of the thirteen pickpockets arrested by the police Thursday were secured by Chief Speers this morning, and are now among the hundreds of others in the rogues' gallery. The men were released, none of their victims having appeared to prosecute them.

Pointers From a Legislator.

"That speech of Cleveland will be of immense benefit to Kansas City," said Colonel Henry A. Newman, the well-known Missouri legislator from Randolph county, to a STAR representative this morning. "He spoke to Chicagoans of their city's growth and development, and in other cities of their beginning and prosperity, but neither in Chicago, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Omaha nor any other western city did he give the value of the real estate transfers for the six months of 1880 and the corresponding period for 1886. This coming from the President will be of incalculable benefit to Kansas City in the east.

"I think the Kansas City 'Junction' the most crowded spot in the west. Why does not the Kansas City Cable company build an elevated road from Walnut street to the rise of the hill on West Ninth? When the Troost avenue cars come to the Junction it means twenty-five more grip and passenger trains. Cars will pass so frequently then that it will be impossible for pedestrians to cross the tracks in safety. An elevated road such as I have spoke of would solve the problem."

Charged with Forgery and Embezzlement.

Walter W. Allen was arrested, last night, on charges of forgery and embezzlement. John D. King, manager of the Garnett coal company, caused the arrest. He claims that Allen obtained some billheads from the company's office, learned the names of some parties who owed the company about $40, filled out the bills for the amounts, collected the money and gave bogus receipts, alleged to have been signed by him. Allen denies the charges. He does no work and claims that his mother, who is in New York, sends him $60 a month for his support. He will have a hearing next Wednesday.

George Francis Train Coming.

George Francis Train will lecture in Kansas City on Sunday and Monday, October 23 and 24, in defense of the condemned Chicago anarchists. [illegible] circular says that, "after a silen[illegible] [illegible]s he breaks it once again—this [illegible] the Republic from blood shed and revolution by saving from a judicial murder, the so-called seven anarchists now under the death watch and within the shadow of the gallows for the crime of free speech, committed in America."

To Forward Kansas City Mexican Trade.

The new Commercial club will meet this evening. The meeting is called for the purpose of appointing a committee of six members to accompany Vice-Consul Rahden to the City of Mexico to invite the directors of the Chamber of Commerce to visit Kansas City and the great National Agricultural Exposition. If the committee is appointed it is to leave immediately on its mission.

The club will give its first banquet in the Essex buil[illegible] Tuesday evening next.

THE LABOR KNIGHTS WRANGLE.

The Proceedings of a Secret Session—Changes in the Laws.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 4.—The details of the secret session of the assembly, on Thursday afternoon, have at last leaked out, and the reason for the lack of a press committee report is at once evident. The committee on boycotts introduced a resolution favoring the action of Master Workman Powderly and the executive board in declaring the big Chicago yards strike off. This was the straw that broke the back of some of the delegates from district assemblies 24 and 25 of Chicago. They offered a substitute resolution, roundly censuring the action of the general master workman and the executive board. Charles F. Lieb, delegate from district assembly 24, made a vehement speech, sustaining the substitute. George A. Schilling, also a delegate from district assembly 24, made a very fiery speech, in which he roundly scored the general master workman and the executive board. T. B. Barry was called upon to make a general review of the circumstances and his connection with the matter. In his remarks he stated that the men would, in his opinion, have gained their point without any expense to the order, and further, he thought the demands of the men were just. General Master Workman Powderly took the floor, and went over the entire matter from beginning to end. He made the statement that the action of the executive board was advised by them, and that if there was any blame in the matter it belonged to him. The committee's resolution was then passed by a vote of 116 to 49.

The committee on law reported to the general assembly of the Knights of Labor this morning and it was found that there was no disposition to make any important changes in the machinery or methods of the order. A rule giving permission to districts or national trades to regulate the time of the delivery of charters to newly organized local assemblies was adopted. A motion to strike out that portion of the constitution which gives the power to the general executive board to submit an amendment to the local assemblies at any time, was met by a substitute, that only on request of five district assemblies should the board submit an amendment. The substitute was adopted. The law qualifying members of the general assembly was slightly altered so that delegates must hereafter show a record of attendance at three sessions of the district assembly instead of four.

Powderly Has Not Resigned.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 15.—The report that General Master Workman Powderly had at 12:30 o'clock written a peremptory resignation created a genuine sensation. Mr. Powderly emphatically denied having resigned. Regarding the lack of harmony among the members of the general executive board, which had been given out as the cause of the alleged resignation, Mr. Powderly refused to express himself.

AT THE EXPOSITION.

The Ticket Sellers as Busy at Ever—Notes of the Big Show.

The attendance at the Exposition continues good to a most satisfactory degree. In the absence of turnstyle arrangements for registering the actual number of visitors, it is impossible to compute accurately, but appearances indicate that the attendance this afternoon is equal to that of yesterday.

The Cowboy band continues to be the musical attraction. It gives concerts each morning, afternoon and evening.

New displays are added or completed and thrown open each day. The latest is that of the Samaritan Mission, Nos. 150 and 152, Wood street, and is labeled as follows: "A partial display of work done by children of the Samaritan Mission, (better known as half acre mission) Kindergarten and primary school combined; comprised of children under school age and those who by physical debility and extreme poverty and lack of parental care are deprived of the advantages of the public schools." The display is in the north gallery, and attracts much attention from philanthropic visitors.

The art gallery was crowded this afternoon.

An honest-looking old gentleman who said he came from Kansas, with his two daughters to visit the Exposition, purchased three tickets yesterday afternoon and said to the ticket seller: "I am an honest man and I know you are honest. I am here with this daughter but the other one is down town. Here is her ticket and when she comes pass her in. You will know her by this." The old man then unwound a long string from a leather pocketbook and brought out a piece of red velvet plush. "There," said he, "her dress is like that. The officers watched for the girl all the afternoon, but she didn't appear.

Another man came in with a carpet sack. He said it contained the Webster county display. There was nothing in it but one ear of corn and a large potato.

The fish car will leave to-day. Many of the fish perished while in this city.

The Texas Traffic association decided at its recent meeting to sell half-fare tickets from all points in Texas to Kansas City and return, from October 12 to November 12.

Free busses are running from the end of Ninth street.

Mr. Irwin Tells What He Knows About the Snub to the Cavalrymen.

"The unfortunate occurrence of the Kansas City Light Cavalrymen being refused admittance to the Priests of Pallas ball happened this way," said L. E. Irwin to-day. "Colonel Hunt said something to me about the boys wishing to attend the ball and I told him to bring them around.

"The Trades Parade association was certainly under obligation to Captain Dunlap and his company, and I thought that as president of the association I could extend them an invitation. When I arrived at the hall I found a group of them standing on the sidewalk. They said they had been refused admittance. I told them to go in with me, and they accompanied me to the door. I explained the matter to Colonel Wilson, who was at the door, and authorized him to let them in. He refused to recognize my authority and admit them. I afterwards supplied them with tickets, but I understand they had some trouble in obtaining admittance even then. They finally were admitted, however. The Kansas City Light Cavalry is composed of our finest young men, and I regret the occurrence exceedingly."

The Cattle Growers' Convention.

The committee having in charge the arrangement for the fourth annual convention of national cattle growers, which convenes in this city two weeks from Monday, are sanguine that the meeting will be a very successful and profitable one. Invitations have been sent to cattle growers all over the country. The railroads have made liberal rates, particularly those from west and southwestern points. The Cowboy band was secured to-day to play during the convention. Accommodations at the hotels have been secured for 1,200 people. It has not yet been decided whether a banquet will be tendered to the visitors, but they will not suffer for entertainment. The Exposition will be at its best and the Fat Stock show, which promises to be the best ever held, will be in progress. The convention will be held in the Coates opera house.

Death of Nathaniel R. Ferguson.

Mr. Nathaniel R. Ferguson died at midnight, at the house of his son-in-law, Captain E. H. Webster, of softening of the brain. Mr. Ferguson was 71 years old and had lived in Kansas City 22 years. Some years ago he was a wholesale grocer on Delaware street, and built the block at Third and Delaware. He was an officer of the old Commercial National bank, which quit business years ago.

The funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. Cameron Mann, at Captain Webster's residence, on the Westport road, at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

Voting on an Important Question.

The Live Stock exchange is holding an election to-day to vote on the question whether the rule which limits the commission charged for the sale of live stock shall be abolished. The general sentiment of the exchange seems to be strongly in favor of the rule.

He Could Not Furnish Bail.

J. W. Sellard, who broke open a trunk at the Cleveland house, at 21 East Third street, yesterday afternoon, had a preliminary examination before Justice Maybury to-day. He was bound over to the grand jury and, in default of $750 bail, committed.

Ready for Rehearsal.

Miss Alice S. Mitchell, of Chicago, is ready to rehearse the chorus of 500 voices to sing with Gilmore's band, as soon as the arrangements are made by the chairman of the local committee, and she is waiting for this to be done.

Mat Meyer Discharged.

Coroner Gray, of Kansas City, Kas., held an inquest to-day on the remains of Jim Finley, the colored boy shot by Mat Meyer Thursday morning. The evidence showed the shooting to have been accidental, and Meyer was discharged.

Delirium Tremens at the Depot.

James A. Carr, a well dressed stranger, from Chicago, was attacked with delirium tremens in the ladies' waiting room of the Union depot last evening. The occupants of the room screamed and for a short time there was much excitement. Carr was taken to the St. Louis avenue station.

Of Importance to Veteran Firemen.

The Veteran Firemen's association will meet at the recorder's court room at 7:30 o'clock next Monday evening. A large attendance is desired, as business of importance to every member is to be transacted.

Licensed to Wed.

Read Olson, 27, and Annie Swenson, 26.

Charles Loch, 28, and Louise Zeh, 19.

George Ferguson, 25, and Scott Dickenson, 23.

Judgments Rendered.

Judge Gill's court was in session to-day. A number of judgments were rendered against dilatory defendants in attachment cases.

Hyacinth glasses and bulbs all taken back from the Exposition building will be sold at Hampton's, 607 Main street.

COUNTERFEITERS' DEN RAIDED.

One Man Captured, Together With a Quantity of Dies and Spurious Coin.

Sheriff Ferguson, of Wyandotte, learned yesterday that a gang of counterfeiters were plying their trade in a shanty just north of the limits of Argentine. Last night he detailed five men to surround the building and capture the entire gang. The posse proceeded to the place, took every precaution against the escape of the "crooks" and quietly closed in on the shanty. They forced an entrance, but found only one inmate, a man who gave the name of Henry Thompson.

A number of quarter and half-dollar pieces in different stages of manufacture were found, together with dies and other counterfeiters' paraphernalia. The coins were very good imitations of the genuine article. The sheriff is now searching for the other members of the gang.

TOO MANY NEW HOUSES.

New York Suffering From a Building Bubble—A Point for Ingalls.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—There is trouble in this city over the building craze. The papers have begun to expose the suicidal course that is being run. The entire upper portion of the city, from about Eightieth street to One Hundred and Eightieth street, is a mass of hastily constructed brick and mortar, with whole blocks marked "For Sale" and "To Let." For at least one-half of these houses there is no demand and no reason why they should have been built. Now that they are built, tenants are not here to occupy them, except at rents which will be ruinous to the up-town owners, and destructive to the down-town interests. Rents in the better portion of the down-town district have already suffered, because from this part of the city there has been quite an exodus into the new of salaried people who have been drawn away by the low rents further up, and the consequence is an extension of the vacant house district down as far as Thirtieth street, and even slightly to Twentieth. The lower wards remain as crowded as ever. Many of the people who inhabit them are too poor to seek anything better, while the majority could not be induced on any terms to leave the filth and dirt by which they are surrounded. There are more vacant buildings now in the city of New York than the demands of the next five years will require, and still the craze goes on. Prudent builders expect a reaction next year, and a general stagnation of the building interest within the city.

A POINT FOR SENATOR INGALLS.

Abuses continue at Castle Garden, and immigrants are still robbed and oppressed, although not to the extent, or, at least, not as openly as before the investigation. The obnoxious railroad pool still continues, and families destined for the West are daily divided and sundered to equalize the traffic. Here is an item Senator Ingalls should have in mind when he takes up this matter officially this winter. It is brief but it talks volumes. A few days ago a party of Swedes arrived at the garden. In making up the assignments to the several pooling roads the families, as usual, were divided, and when the train started west one young girl of about 18 years was left behind, as she constituted a surplus and could not conveniently be partitioned into seven parts. Alone and in a strange land, ignorant of the language and perfectly helpless, she became almost insane, and but for a timely rescue would have committed suicide by drowning, Castle Garden still remains a hell, and the railroad runner was not far wrong when he said no change in it could be expected. NO EVIDENCE YET AGAINST SHELLEY

The Board of Examiners the Accused—Commissioner Oberly Coming.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 15.—Commissioner Oberly, speaking to-day concerning the Kansas City civil service, said that while no formal charges had been prefered against Postmaster Shelley or the local board of examiners at Kansas City, yet the attention of the commission had been directed by a gentleman resident at Kansas City whose name he refused to divulge to certain irregularities in the certification of names for appointment made by the local board of examiners to the postmaster which will render necessary an investigation.

Upon a suggestion that possibly the board of local examiners had acted upon the misapprehension of the rules of the civil service law, Mr. Oberly responded with emphasis: "No, that is impossible. The board must be grossly ignorant or else wilful violators of the law. The commission has evidence that not only have the board of examiners certified for appointment persons who passed an examination below the list of the four eligibles but certified parties who had not been examined at all by the local board."

To the inquiry whether Postmaster Shelley was responsible for these alleged violations of the civil service law Commissioner Oberly said: "We have no evidence as yet incriminating Postmaster Shelley. We only know that these irregularities have occurred, and it remains to be seen whether or not he connived at these illegal certifications."

Mr. Oberly further stated that there was no doubt that this investigation would be thoroughly prosecuted, and that it was probable he would go himself to Kansas City at the earliest practicable moment to superintend it.

Found Guilty of Murder.

ROCKPORT, Mo., Oct. 15—Thomas Harris, charged with the murder of John McDowell, of Portland, Ind., has been found guilty of murder in the first degree, which means that the defendant must be hanged.

McDowell and Harris worked for Townsend. When the McDowell boy quit he said he was going to get a skiff and go down the river to Kansas City. The Harris boys went with him to get him started. Together they fell in with Arthur Blake. They visited the saloons and started for the woods, when McDowell was murdered for his money, $14. This was last July, and when Harris returned to work he reported that he had seen McDowell in a skiff on the water. This was believed until a few weeks ago, when some hunters found the bones of a broken skull, indicating foul play, and an old sachel, in which was a letter and some clothing which identified the remains as those of McDowell. Warrants were sworn out, and Harris and Blake were arrested. In his trial Harris swore that Blake did the killing, and that it was not with any collusion, but unexpected to him, and the reason he (Harris) did not tell it was that he was afraid of Blake.

An Involuntary Marriage.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Oct. 15.—At Fairchild, this county, Tuesday, several young people, with whom was Edward Foss, aged 40, station agent of the Omaha railway, were out walking when they met Miss Clara Foster, aged 19, who was driving with R. C. Hine, a justice of the peace. The conversation turned on marriage and one of the party laughingly suggested that Mr. Foss and Miss Foster be married, as Miss Foster would only have to drop the last three letters of her name and add an "s." The parties concurred jokingly and Hine performed the ceremony. The next day the serious nature of the affair dawned upon them and society is much excited. Miss Foster is a daughter of N. C. Foster, the millionaire lumberman. Friends of the parties think there is no way out of it but a divorce.

Big Forgeries in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, Oct. 15.—Information was given to-day of the discovery by the treasury department of extensive forgeries of powers of attorney transfering credits against the government. One transfer of credit involved $149,000 and a series of signatures had been forged. Large amounts of the forged paper had been sold here. A startling report, probably based on the foregoing announcement, got into circulation to-day that forged government bonds to the amount of $1,000,000 had been discovered. The report was denied by the minister of finance.

A Physician Enjoined from Practicing.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Oct. 15.—The case of Dr. Moses Marshall, of Easton, against Dr. G. B. Campbell, late of Kansas, to enjoin Dr. Campbell from practicing in Buchanan county was arraigned before Judge O. M. Spencer yesterday. The medical profession was out in full force. It was proved that Campbell, by an agreement signed a year ago, previous to his departure for Kansas, and while practicing in Easton, promised upon the payment of a bonus never to practice in this county again. The injunction was granted and the case will come up on its merits November 4.

General Kilpatrick to be Buried at West Point.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The remains of General Kilpatrick were to-day placed on a catafalque in a room in the city hall. The room was decorated with a large American flag and guards of honor from Kilpatrick post G. A. R. were placed in charge. The secretary of war has authorized the burial of the remains at West Point.

An Echo of the Chatsworth Disaster.

PONTIAC, Ill., Oct. 15.—For the past week the Livingston county grand jury have been investigating the case of Timothy Coughlin, who was held responsible by the coroner's jury for the Chatsworth railroad disaster. After hearing all the evidence the charge was ignored, evidence not being sufficient to find a bill, and Coughlin was released from jail.

Fire Raging at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 15.—Fire has been raging since noon on Eastern avenue.

It started in C. Crane & Co.'s saw mill, 257 Eastern avenue, burned four acres of lumber and now is coming northwestward towards the city, pushed by a gale of wind.

About ten houses are burning and they are on opposite sides of the avenue. The situation at this moment is threatening.

Later—The wind is blowing towards the river now and that will save the city.

The loss to the Crane Sawmill and Lumber company will be $90,000. The others will lose not over $40,000. An area of five acres has been burned over.

NEWS NOTES.

General Sheridan has left Washington on a tour through the west.

Two men were burned to death in a saw mill at Cygnet, O., yesterday.

The knitting mills at Port Dover, Can., were destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $24,400.

The latest cotton crop estimate places the yield this year at 6,550,000 bales, against 6,505,000 last year.

General Market Summary.

Norton & Worthington furnish the following:

Wheat closed to-day in Chicago at 1 p. m. at yesterday's last prices. The market was dull, slow and featureless, and the majority of trades were of the evening up character.

New York wires us as follows:

The wheat market opened quiet but firmer at about yesterday's closing figures. Trading was generally local but exporters and Wall street parties bought the former to cover short contracts and the latter only for long accounts. Yesterday's clearances were 146,000 bushels, making 213,000 in five days.

This and the recent large purchases of flour for foreign account reinforced the hopes of the bulls and gives rise to more confidence; moreover receipts are running lighter than expected, and predictions as to the visible supply point to an increase of only half a million next Monday.

Corn ruled weak and dull, closing ¼c lower than yesterday. Monday's estimated heavy receipts were a depressing feature.

January lard declined 2½@5c, but outside of this provisions were nearly motionless and from a speculative point of view the session was a stupid one.

Estimated receipts hogs to-day 19,000, official yesterday 25,903; shipments 14,229, left over about 4,000. Receipts for week 113,383. Same week last year 52,913. "The strike was in progress then." Packing to-day 1,824,000. Last year 2,342,000. Quiet and fair. Sales ranged from 4.40 @4.80 for light, 4.25@4.40 for rough packing, 4.40@4.80 for heavy packing and shipping.

Later, 9:45 a. m.—Receipts hogs 20,000. Market dull. Price 5 to 10 lower.

Yesterday's inspection; wheat 154 cars, corn 495 cars, 6,000 bushels oats, 246; barley, 80; wheat, out 80,020 bushels, corn 387,766, oats 143,831.

St. Louis Beats Detroit.

The St. Louis Browns defeated the Detroits yesterday at Brooklyn by the score of 5 to 2.

A COLD DAY FOR BANDITS.

Attempts Made on Two Trains, Both of Which Fail Completely.

EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 15.—The Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio mail and express, which left here last evening, was stopped four miles out of the city by three masked men. While two covered the engineer and fireman with their revolvers the third ran back to the mail car and threw a bomb against the door. The explosion which followed shattered the door and side of the car into splinters. The agent was dazed and badly frightened by the shock, but uninjured. He recovered himself, however, in time to pour a charge from a double-barreled shotgun into the breast of the robber who jumped into the car, killing him instantly. The two on the engine, hearing the report, fled, and the mail agent fired the remaining load after them. The train then returned to El Paso.

Foiled by the Fireman.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 15.—An attempt was made to rob the International & Great Northern passenger tain, one and one-half miles north of Spring station, in Harris county, Tex., last night, two masked men boarding the engine as the train pulled out from the station, one in front, who covered Engineer Converse with a revolver and the other on the rear of the tender. The engineer was ordered to stop, which he did, but Fireman George Lyne jumped off the engine, caught on the rear car and rushed through the train, notifying the trainmen and passengers. When the robbers saw that they jumped from the train and took to the woods.

THIEVES AT THE DEPOT.

Passengers Plucked of Their Valuables By Thieves Who Work Openly.

This morning Depot Master Rogers was besieged with complaints of careless travelers whose valises had been stolen from them. The depot specials have collected a miscellaneous assortment of empty bags and valises which have been picked up in the yards, where they evidently were thrown by thieves. Bishop D. E. Tuttle, of St. Louis, put his bag on the floor of the depot beside him while purchasing a ticket this morning. When he stooped to pick it up he found it had been stolen. The bishop was loud in his lamentations. He admitted to a reporter that as the bag contained nothing but his priestly robes and sermons they could be of no earthly use to anyone. Leonard Butler, a commercial traveler, was deprived of a gold watch and $50 in cash by some light-fingered thief to-day. Mrs. Theodore Crandall, of Olathe, missed [illegible] plush sacque which she w[illegible] enough to leave in the ladies[illegible] Vadar Klein, a German musician [illegible] left a valise on a seat in the waiting room depot, and when he returned he found [illegible] someone had stolen it. The valise contained a number of musical instruments, and $600 in money.

GERMANY'S CROWN PRINCE DOOMED.

He is Afflicted With a Cancer—Grave Fears for the Future.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Dr. Williard Nelson of this city, who has just returned from Germany, says that the condition of the Crown Prince Frederick is unquestionably precarious. It is admitted now that he is suffering from cancer of the throat, known as the tobacco smoker's cancer, very similar to that of General Grant.

"Conservative Germans," Dr. Nelson added, "view the probability of the crown prince's early demise with much alarm. The emperor, already past 91, has had several pseudo-apoplectic seizures, though this has been industriously denied. His death is liable to occur at any moment. With the crown prince as the emperor's successor, it is believed that a peaceful policy would be maintained, and that Bismarck's influence would be less predominant. But if he is at death's door the imperial power will fall to Prince William, the crown prince's eldest son, a young man of 28 years, who is said to be every inch a soldier. People who know him say he is bold, impetuous and fiery, and is ambitious to make a name as a warrior."

France Excited.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—France is still occupied, as it has been for days, with the great scandal, the disgrace of General Caffarel, the selling of the Legion of Honor decorations, and the implication in the mess of a long list of the leading men of the day.

The most sensational incident of the whole affair is the arrest of General Boulanger. There is tremendous excitement over the arrest, and he gets unlimited sympathy, most of which is wasted, as at the worst the council of ministers which will decide whether the punishment should be more severe, can only deprive him of his command. But that they will hesitate to do [illegible] The ministry is anything but strong. Boulanger is their bugbear, and to have him out of the way at Clermont-Ferrand is their heart's desire. To deprive him of this command would be to have him back in Paris, prancing through the streets on his black charger and fanning popular enthusiasm into the flaming condition which the ministers are most anxious to avoid. B[illegible] anger dearly loves Paris, his comfortable quarters at the Hotel du Leuvre and all the rest of it. He shares the general belief that a government crisis will soon come along and is eager to be on hand to look after his interests. A severe punishment would allow him to pose as a martyr without losing much and perhaps bring the tide of popular enthusiasm sufficiently high to float him back into the war office.

Business Less Active.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Bradstreet's says: "Special telegrams from leading business centers throughout the United States note a continuance of the check to the distribution of general merchandise first reported a week ago. At Kansas City, relatively, one of the most active domestic trade centers, there is reported only a moderate activity from interior buyers, with fewer goods moving. At St. Joe it is fair in [illegible], hardware lines, but not so good [illegible]. At Burlington, Ia., there has been a falling [illegible] in dry goods, and while business is active at O[illegible] in leading departments, owing to more numerous orders, the takings are smaller. New York and Philadelphia represent a moderate activity. There is no change at Baltimore, and at Boston there is a fair volume of business only, and less in dry goods, but rather more in wool. San Francisco reports business quiet, wheat very dull, and 96,090 tons of Hawaiian sugar received this year to October 1, with shipments of 40,000 tons. New Orleans, with heavy sugar receipts, and a resulting brisk interior request; Pittsburg, with a brisk production and demand for iron and coal, and Chicago, with a satisfactory average of transactions, with an active and increasing volume of business at Denver form the noticeable exceptions.

An Editor Imprisoned and Fined.

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Oct. 15.—John N. Reynolds, editor of the Atchison Times, was found guilty yesterday in the United States district court of using the mails for the purpose of defrauding. The case grew out of the fact that Reynolds, as president of the Atchison Live Stock Insurance company, had sent circulars through the mails which purported to be signed by the cashier of the Farmers' bank of Atchison, representing that the insurance company had on deposit $50,608.16, and as a result succeeded in securing about $30,000 in checks, $15,000 of which he cashed. The sentence was that he be imprisoned in the penitentiary eighteen months and pay a fine of $200.

During his absence his paper will be managed by Mrs. Reynolds, as well as edited.

Belva Lockwood and Train Organize a New Party.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 15.—A convention of social reformers, presided over by Mrs. Belva Lockwood, has been in session here for the past few days and has organized a new political party, adopting a platform and naming a national committee. The name of the new organization is "Industrial Reform party." Another meeting will be held in Washington, February 22. The platform includes woman suffrage, prohibition and government ownership of transportation and telegraph lines. Among the participants in the convention was George Francis Train.

Those Iowa Evictions.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 15.—Dr. A. M. Hamblin, one of those evicted in O'Brien county, Iowa, writes to friends here that the half has not been told of the horrors of the evictions. Many of the families are living on the public highways in tents made of quilts and sheets. Old men of seventy and maimed soldiers and widows have lost their homes and are sleeping on the cold ground. The British syndicate has taken their teams and milk cows to pay the cost of the evictions. There were 120 families evicted.

Wyandotte County Republicans in Convention.

The Republicans of Wyandotte county held their nominating convention in Dunning's hall, Wyandotte, to-day. Judge I. L. Miller, the present judge of the district court, was nominated by acclamation to that office. J. H. Lafley was nominated by acclamation for the office of county surveyor. Charles Dudley, a colored man, was nominated on the fourth ballot for register of deeds.

The Coming Fat Stock Show.

Superintendent Childs, of the stock yards, is putting Riverview Park in shape for the Fat Stock show, which will begin October 26 and continue eight days, exclusive of Sunday. Professor Sanborn, the secretary, will open an office in a day or two at the stock yards, where business connected with the show can be transacted. The secretary states that the show will be the finest ever held.

Santa Fe Trains Delayed.

A destructive washout occurred on the Santa Fe railroad yesterday morning thirty miles south of Arkansas City. A section of road bed nearly two miles in length was washed away and three bridges were damaged. All through trains have been stopped and none will run until the necessary repairs have been made.

Three Outlaws Killed.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 15.—Three outlaws named Miller, Leach and Traynor were shot and killed, yesterday, in the Indian territory. The men, one day last week, robbed and burned the village of Oaks, in the Territory.

WHEN it comes to a "NAPOLEON of finance" failing for a handsome sum London can not compete with New York. GLINKA, the young London banker, has failed for half a million, while IVES, the New York financier, went under for fifteen millions. The United States has the greatest financiers in the world. A few of them are honest.

A MORNING paper boasts that the newsboys were still crying its edition on the streets at 9 o'clock at night. It is not uncommon for newsboys to get "stuck" with morning papers, and, when unable to sell, they naturally hawk copies about the streets till a late hour; but it is very unusual for morning newspapers to mention it.

THE cable announces the death of Miss DINAH MARIA MULOCK (CRAIK). She is the author of a number of popular novels, the most famous of which is "John Halifax, Gentleman," in which she attempted to portray the perfect gentleman. While she did not attain to the first rank among novelists, yet her position is above the average, and she has done no little to entertain readers of English fiction.

SINCE his time many other great characters have written their names large in the volume of American history, but GEORGE WASHINGTON still holds his honored place and must ever remain a revered character in the affections of the people. His commanding figure and peaceful face will soon stand in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. A bronze statue of him is to be placed in the central portion of the beautiful grounds.

THE attack of the New York police on the people at the meeting of the Progressive Labor party is generally condemned as rash, brutal and wrong. The police, it would appear, ought to be able to distinguish between an assembly of peaceable laboring men and the mad, raving rabble that usually make up the meetings of the Socialists and Anarchists. The right of the people to meet and consider questions of interest to them and the public is sacred to every American, and it is therefore only natural that there should be as much indignation against an infringement of that right as there was in the case of the New York police in dispersing the crowd at a peaceable meeting of the Labor party.

WILL DR. PARKER of London, under the laws, be eligible to Plymouth pulpit as the successor of HENRY WARD BEECHER? Trinity church in New York had extended a call to Rev. E. WALPOLE WARREN of England. The United States District Attorney has notified the vestry and wardens of the church that if they install Mr. WARREN as a paid pastor over the church he will bring suit against them under the contract labor law. If the law will apply to the clergy, why will it not reach actors and opera singers? The United States is getting to be "quite an exclusive set." The laws here try to exclude a great many articles of every day consumption by tariff laws. Are they now to be construed to exclude all alien talent? The home talent of this country does not need to be protected. It is not an "infant industry."

NEWSPAPER OBLIGATIONS.

THE Minneapolis Tribune has brought itself into notoriety by printing offensive comments on the President and Mrs. CLEVELAND during their recent visit to that city. Some of the Minneapolis people attested their indignation by burning in effigy one BLETHEN, who is the responsible manager of the paper—an old time custom "more honored in the breach than in the observance," as a rule. BLETHEN claims that he knew nothing of the articles, but that is scarcely to the point, for it was his business to know of them, and it was commendable for the people to resent the outrage in some emphatic way. But the reductio ad absurdum of the whole affair is the action of the city council, which has not been content with denouncing the insulting articles but "demands an apology therefor and a suitable retraction" from the offending journal. This extraordinary action has been taken by the council because the Minneapolis Tribune is the official paper of the city."

"Official paper" is a misleading term. If the Minneapolis Tribune is merely a sheet issued by the common council of that city for the purpose of printing its own proceedings and advertising for public contracts, then it may be called properly an "official paper." But if the proceedings of the council and the city advertisements are printed by the Minneapolis Tribune at so much per line, as is probable, then the common council or the city is simply an advertiser like any other, and has no more control of, or responsibility for, the utterances of that paper than has Jones, Smith or Robinson who advertises therein, and the exaction of an apology and retraction is impertinent. Newspapers are printed largely to keep common councils in the straight and narrow way, as far as is possible, but they are in no sense accountable to common councils, whether they print the city advertisements or not. It will be a sorry condition of things for the public if the time shall ever come when newspapers shall be subject to the orders of city aldermen.

There is nothing in all this designed to condone or excuse the offense of the Minneapolis Tribune. Its treatment of the President and his wife was simply brutal. But the disciplining of a newspaper is in the hands of the public. When it is guilty of a personal libel, the responsible head may be summoned in court and required to answer like any other offender against the law. But when the offense is against good taste, or common courtesy, or public policy, then it is for the people to resent and punish. Any newspaper which is chronically given to such offenses (and, unfortunately, there are such newspapers) may be brought to a proper sense of its obligations by the refusal of the people to patronize it or read it. But there is no other way.

OPPORTUNITY.

This I beheld, or dreamed it in a dream:
There spread a cloud of dust along a plain;
And underneath the cloud, or in it, raged
A furious battle, and men yelled, and swords
Shocked upon swords and shields. A prince's banner
Wavered, then staggered backward, hemmed by foes.
A craven hung along the battle's edge,
And thought, "Had I a sword of keener steel—
That blue blade that the king's son bears—but this
Blunt thing!—" he snapt and flung it from his hand,
And lowering crept away and left the field.
Then came the king's son, wounded, sore bestead,
And weaponless, and saw the broken sword,
Hilt buried in the dry trodden sand,
And ran and snatched it, and with battle shout
Lifted afresh he hewed his enemy down,
And saved a great cause that heroic day.

READ THE ANSWER IN THE STAR.

INQUIRER—"Can a postmaster serve as a county or township officer, i. e., is there any law to prevent his qualifying as such officer while occupying the position of postmaster?" The civil service regulations do not allow a postmaster to hold a municipal office.

L. H.—"Will you please inform me through your columns what was the Christian and surname of the general commanding the British forces at Waterloo, and whether there was a general named Collery or Cully engaged there?" (1.) Arthur Wellesley Wellington commanded the British forces at Waterloo. (2.) There was not.

WILLIAM B. HIRT—"Please inform a reader who was the first man to introduce long distance walking, and give Weston's best record for six days. Please give date that Kansas City was incorporated." W. Perkins walked eighteen miles in England in 1877. This is the first long walk record of which is found. E. P. Weston made 1,977½ miles in 1,000 hours over country road, resting Sunday, in England, January, 1879; also made 5,000 miles in 100 days, Sundays included, using only temperate drinks, in England, November, 1883. Weston's six-day record is insignificant. P. Fitzgerald walked 610 miles in six days at New York in May, 1884. The present charter was granted in 1875.

One Thing that Doesn't Bother Her.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

A woman will growl about anything in a theater except one thing. She'll complain about the seats; she'll have something to say abut the restless man in front of her, the talkative people behind her, the narrowness of the rows, the badness of the gas, but she never says a word about the woman's tall hat in front of her. She'll bob serenely up and down and right and left, and crane over and under to see the stage, but she will not object. Why? Because she's very likely got one on herself. That should not always prevent her from speaking out, because we very often complain of the very thing in others we do ourselves. I may say we always do. But there is somthing sacred about the fashion for a woman. The fashion covers a multitude of sins aginst taste. It does not matter how ugly a dress may be on a woman; if she's in the fashion she's all right. You cannot scare a woman out of a high hat. Ridicule, supplication and insinuation all have faied. The papers have tried it all sorts of ways. They have even called women ugly who wear them. They don't mind. Its no use calling a woman ugly anyway. They don't believe they are. You can't get them to believe it. They sometimes say they are themselves. They don't believe it. You cannot knock out of a woman the calm conciousness that she is attractive. They don't believe that what is strictly fasionable is unbecoming. It is impossible. The high hat has knocked the life out of the matinee, though. That's where the woman gets the full benefit of its inconvenience. And if women could go to the theater at night alone the theatrical business would go to pieces, for neither men nor women would go and sit behind the high hat. But what are you going to do about it? It's the one kind of a thing about which a woman will not be dictated to by man.

A Socialistic Colony.

Where is socialism to be found in practice? In New South Wales. So says Lord Carrington, the governor. His excellency recently made, says the Sydney Morning Herald, a very statesmanlike speech, principally upon the constitutional affairs as they now exist in England and in New South Wales. Alluding to this colony, he pointed out that in addition to what was to be found in England in the form of manhood suffrage, vote by ballot, abolition of property qualification for members of parliament, and equal electoral districts, we found here no state church, no hereditary aristocracy. "Eight hours here," he went on to say, "are considered long enough working hours, instead of the ten, twelve, and sometimes seventeen in England. Public houses on Sundays are shut and museums are open. Torrens' act makes the sale and transfer of land cheap and easy. Men unable to find employment are provided with work by the government, and education is practically free. In fact, if we leave out a demand for a free daily meal for each child attending school, and a proposal that steps should be taken to organize labor under skilled direction on uncultivated lands, we find a state of things exactly similar to that suggested in a memorial presented last year to Lord Salisbury by the English social democratic federation, who in Europe would be considered generally as dangerous and half-crazy visionaries. The result is that we have now an almost perfect system of government. At our head we have a constitutionel sovereign, and through this sovereign we have a democracy in its purest and truest sense—a government, in short, as President Lincoln expressed it, 'of the people, by the people, for the people.'"

Happiness.

Edmund Burke.

The seat of happiness is in the mind. Philosophical happiness is to want little. Civil or vulgar happiness is to want much and enjoy much.

GOULD'S SHABBY ATTIRE.

PRINCIPALLY REMARKABLE FOR CARELESSNESS AND LACK OF STYLE.

Carefully Noted While He Rode Deadhead in an Elevated Railway Car—His Daughter-in-Law's Dresses—The Marriage of a Lottery Heiress Last Week.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The two men at the front of commercial and finanical interests for a week have been Robert Garrett and Jay Gould, by reason of the absorption of the Baltimore & Ohio telegraph by the Western Union. A greater contrast of individuality, so far as "the tailor makes the man," could not be imagined. Garrett is a swell of the highest degree, and his toilets, even in the exciting days of his antagonism with Gould, just before his retirement from public gaze, were marvels of exaggerated fashion. He commanded attention from strangers who would have passed Gould without a second glance.

It has come to be so much the established custom of rich men to dress like impoverished clerks, that I was a good deal interested to inspect the clothing of Jay Gould, as the garments appeared upon him in a Ninth avenue elevated train. In nearly all respects he complies with tradition. He had come down from Irvington in his yacht, and, according to his habit, the Atlanta was tied up at a wharf near Twenty-third street, North river. From there he had walked two blocks to the elevated railroad station, where he passed the gateman without paying the regulation nickel for the privilege of a ride. He met an elderly gentleman on the platform, who took a good deal of pleasure in sitting beside the magnate on the way down town. When Mr. Gould sat down he leaned back against the window, crossed his legs, and tilting his head over towards his friend began to talk to him in a thoughtful, earnest way, while he occasionally patted his own knees with a folded newspaper. He had on a modest, black Derby hat that might have been a relic of the last season, for it was not in the current style. His overcoat was unbuttoned. It was a dark blue, single-breasted garment that came down to his knees, and the skirts turned up at the edges, in evidence that it had been carelessly sat upon many, many times. His suit was of one piece made up in anything but a stylish way, and worn without regard to appearances. A one-button cutaway coat was not buttoned, the trousers were of less than medium width. His shoes were of heavy material, made apparently for comfort only, and fastened with buttons at the side. The top button of one shoe was off: the lower button of the other was not fastened, the buttoner probably would not work satisfactorily. They were blackened but the polish looked as if it had been put on the night before. Beneath his beard which shows a few gray hairs here and there, appeared a stand up collar, with rather long points turned down over a dark scarf. His manner was that of a man with a good deal on his mind, the Baltimore & Ohio telegraph deal was on that very day at its critical point, but he was not nervous, and in no way did he show any consciousness that he might be stared at by all persons in view. After riding a few blocks, he folded his hands and stopped talking, looking with an absorbed expression at the bell rope. Then he turned and noticed that a beardless young man at his side was reading a copy of one of the Wall street dailies. He glanced quickly from the sheet to the face of the reader, and presently, when the young man laid the paper down, Mr. Gould asked permission to borrow it for a moment. He turned the pages over rapidly, giving a cursory glance at several columns, and reading at least one article through. Then he returned it with an absent-minded "Thank you," and resumed his conversation with his friend. When he read the paper he took from his pocket the only evidence of unusual means he displayed on the trip—a gold-rimmed pair of eye glasses attached to his vest by a silk cord. At Barclay street he started up and looked inquiringly out of the window.

"Aren't we there?" he asked of himself, and then replied, as he settled down again, "No; it's only Barclay."

His tones were soft to a degree that made it impossible to imagine him acting as the stern tyrant over a multitude of interests and employes. He left the train at Cortlandt street to go to his office in the Western Union building, and as he rose the Wall street paper fell from the young man's lap to the floor, where it lay unheeded until a man on the other side of the car said to the young fellow, "Do you know who it was that borrowed your paper?"

"No," was the reply, "who was it?"

"Jay Gould."

"Is that so?" exclaimed the boy in astonishment, as he turned quickly about to get a view of the disappearing financier. Then he gravely stooped and picked up the discarded paper, folded it tenderly and put it into his pocket. Nothing could have been plainer than that the boy was an ambitious novice in the street, that Jay Gould was his hero, and that the precious paper that the magnate had borrowed from him to read, was to be preserved as a valuable souvenir.

JAY GOULD'S DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

But if Gould is careless in his dress his son George's wife, the ex-actress, is the reverse. Her toilets are marvels of tasteful expenditure. She is above the average in prettiness, she has a distinguished style of her own, and she is ambitious to be admirable. Her air is essentially that of an actress whenever she appears in public, although it is tempered by refinement and controled by exquisite judgment. Even before she married into great wealth, and was on a moderate salary in Daly's theatre company, she managed to be a charming dresser. One of her achievements, over which she now smiles retrospectively, was a dress that could be used in both mimic and actual life. She enacted in the current play a lady at a ball, and there wore a gown with no sleeves and little bodice. But the material was dark and the shape, so far as it went, was undemonstrative. Mrs. Gould, nee Kingdon, had sleeves and a section of corsage made to attach to the dress and this turned it into a suitable thing for afternoon calling of Sunday church. Thus she gained substantially two robes in one. She doesn't have to scheme in that way now.

BERRY WALL'S CHANGE OF CLOTHING.

A toilet story is told of Berry Wall, the King of the Dudes. His clothing is remarkable for quantity rather than for loudness of style. He changes his apparel many times a day and has singularly exact ideas of propriety in costume. What would do to wear at one time and place would not do for another occasion of seeming similarity. He discovers niceties of requirement which escape the ordinary gentleman. Well, it is related that he had two engagements the other evening, and they came so close together that he had no time to go to his residence for the necessary change of costume. So he had his valet put one second set of raiment in a bag and made the shift in a coupe while riding from one of the places to the other. Closed curtains and a lantern served him, but what if there had been a collision and upset in the street at an awkward juncture of the quick change?

A LOTTERY MAN'S DAUGHTER'S WEDDING.

The wedding that was to have been the most wonderful that New York ever knew came off on Thursday, but not in the magnificent manner planned. Illness in the bride's family modified the scheme of resplendence. Wealth is so plenty here that a man can be a five-millionaire without being at all celebrated for it. That is the case with Morris, the chief owner of the Louisiana lottery. He lives most magnificently at Throgg's Neck, a quiet suburb, and is practically unknown to New Yorkers. His daughter has just become the wife of Thurlow Weed Barnes, nephew of the late Thurlow Weed, and the arrangements for a wedding at the homestead comprised enough of lavish magnificence to make a thousand brides happy. Such a massing of flowers, such a quantity of rare viands, such a river of champagne, such facilities of travel by special trains and boats, would have qualified each of the four thousand invited guests to thereafter trumpet abroad the splendors of the Morris wedding. But the death-bed sickness of a relative compelled the substitution of a church ceremony in the city.

THE DECLINE OF RIFLE SHOOTING.

Do you recall the furor of a few years ago over rifle shooting at Creedmoor? That is past and gone. At the first of the big international shoots, at least 10,000 persons were on the range. The crowds stood there all day long, watching the long range men twist themselves into grotesque attitudes and make bull's eyes. The long range men developed unsuspected possibilities of the favorite American weapon, and great improvements were made in rifles, sights, ammunition and paraphernalia of the range. The international contests were watched with the keenest interest on both sides of the ocean, and the scores and diagrams of targets were sent by telegraph to all the great newspapers and published as the biggest news matter of the day. Teams from England, Scotland and Ireland came over here to shoot at Creedmoor, but they do not come any more. The Palma prize, a $10,000 trophy made in 1878 to be contested for in international contests, lies in Tiffany's vault, as useless and meaningless as the discarded bottom of a worn-out wash boiler. Various causes, including mismanagement, have killed popular interest. Obstacles were put in the way of introducing improvements, the making of restrictive regulations and the like. These might be credited to nothing more than bad judgment on the part of the management, but when costly rifles were surreptitiously ruined by putting screw drivers into the bores and twisting them around, or by shooting nails through them, the owners of the guns began to lose confidence in Creedmoor as a resort for gentlemen. Then the authenticity of certain men's scores began to be questioned, and it was agreed among many of those who shot for love of the sport, that in the hands of some men the lead pencil was mightier than the rifle, whereupon they turned their backs upon Creedmoor and left it to a few mug-hunters and the National Guard. The latter continue to shoot there, because they are ordered to and haven't any choice. There was a time when a man could not get through the gate at Creedmoor without a ticket. Now the gate is left wide open. When I got there, nobody stopped me at the gate to ask for ticket or money. If I remember right, the gate was taken away altogether. I walked in and went to the hotel. A boy was sitting on the piazza. I wanted a bite to eat and went into the lunch room. Nobody there. I found a man in the kitchen and got a sandwich from him. Then I walked out to the old long range firing point. Not a soul there. Eight or ten men were down at the 500 yard range, and I went there. They were all in uniform except two, and one of those was a militia officer and the other a reporter from Massachusetts. Three men were lying on the ground shooting. Of the others two were scorers, one was watching the targets through a telescope, and the rest were officers detailed to boss the job. One of the shooters was the executive officer, who had charge of all the matches. There wasn't enough going on to keep him busy, and he was driving away ennui by shooting a gun in a pool match. Then I saw a man in a fatigue uniform, who looked as though he were fatigued too, coming down the range. He was dragging a little cart behind him, and in the cart were his rifle, ammunition case, cleaning tools and all the little things that a marksman finds handy. He went toward the quarters of the statistical officer, and as it was lonesome at the 500 yard range, I followed him. He was W. M. Farrow, one of the few old timers who have not become entirely discouraged. I don't suppose he would have been there if he hadn't wanted to try some experiments, with a new rifle. It was one he had made himself, and the simplicity of its action was admirable. Improvements in rifles are being made all the time, and the tendency everywhere is to small bores. In Europe, the armies are being equipped with 32-calibre repeaters of tremendous power and range, but New York state clings to its clumsy 50-calibre single loaders, and the regular army is kept packing the old latch block converted musket around and swearing that it is the greatest gun ever invented. If Creedmore were what it used to be, you would see some of the crack shots experimenting with the new rifles and ammunition that are revolutionizing infantry armaments in the old world. KANS.

ROMANTIC, BUT NOT NOVEL.

A Missouri Man Going to Australia to Marry a Woman He Has Never Seen.

From the Alta Californian.

Among the passengers who sailed for the antipodes on the steamer Alameda last Friday was a gentleman from Missouri—William Milan, of St. Joseph—whose acquaintance with the young woman he hopes to make his wife savors somewhat of the romantic. Several months ago a relative of Milan's living in Cheswick, Australia, wrote a letter to the Missouri merchant, telling him of the many virtues of a young lady residing in Cheswick, whom the realative described as being both handsome and wealthy. Mr. Milan immediately wrote to the young lady asking for a correspondence. He described himself and his business outlook as favorable as possible and enclosed a photograph, fearing that she may have a misguided opinion as to the physical appearance of a Missourian.

Much to the young merchant's surprise the lady accepted his offer of a correspondence, and she in turn forwarded a photograph of herself. Her stately and handsome figure, open countenance, large eyes, which she described as being black, and the neat arrangement of her hair, together with the fact that she is an heiress, so pleased the Missourian that he proposed, and in due time his offer of marriage was accepted. Upon receiving a letter notifying him that his suit was favored. Mr. Milan proposed an early marriage. The Australian heiress answered that the ceremony could take place as soon as he reached Cheswick. He immediately purchased an elegant home in St. Joseph, and furnished it in first-class style. To a number of his intimate friends Mr. Milan stated that he would return to his Missouri home a Benedict.

The groom to be is a man of about thirty years of age; tall, and with features such as are usually denominated handsome. Being rich, he was considered by the mothers of St. Joseph or those who possessed marriageable daughters, the best catch in the county. Before leaving on the vessel for Australia, Mr. Milan could not be persuaded to exhibit the photograph of the fair one, although he acknowledged having it in his valise.

"Although I have never seen Miss ——," said he, suddenly checking himself; "no, I won't tell you her name. Although I have never seen her, I am sufficiently pleased with her to make her my wife. That the young lady's character is unimpeachable I am confident from the assertion of my cousin in Cheswick. I knew her to be educated from the character of her letters, that she is beautiful any person can see by a look at her photograph. At first her wealth was an object to me, but since the first two or three letters received from her I no longer think of that, but am anxious to meet and wed her for her own dear sake."

As the steamer cast off from the dock those who were acquainted with the object of the young merchant's visit to Australia wished him a pleasant voyage, and all expressed hope that he would find his intended spouse all that fancy and distance painted.

STEVENSON IN NEW YORK.

His Poor Health—His Early Efforts Discouraged by the Magazine Editors.

From the Philadelphia Press.

Mr. Robert Louis Stevenson is now in New York spending weary days and nights in the "mattress grave," to which Heine was condemned in his later years. Mr. Stevenson is, fortunately, not in so bad a plight. He has none of the optimism which is one of the saddest of symptoms in the consumptive, and I do not know that his malady is consumption. Nor can I find that anyone else does. Years ago, when Mr. Stevenson was in San Francisco, he had a bad cough, but my informant was by no means of the opinion that it was consumption, but rather one of the chest troubles which hypochondria magnifies; but Mr. Stevenson is far, very far, from being a hypochondriac. His work is wonderful but his personality is more wonderful still. A friend in New York, of wide literary acquaintance, tells me that the author of "Treasure Island" is the most interesting man the most brilliant talker he ever met. And this impression genius can make in bed with two thin hands, "more sensitive and beautiful than any woman's," on the coverlet. Another friend after spending some time with him, writes me of the great novelist: "He is in bed, poor fellow, but full of life, humor, subtlety, curiosity and a genial spirit."

This is as one would like to have it of the author of the "New Arabian Nights," and I like also to know that attention and appreciation are both sweet to Mr. Stevenson after frosty years in which he knocked with bruised hands at the doors now open so wide, and he no longer in walking trim.

His articles were rejected in turn by every paper in San Francisco and many East, one or two of which have since spent a pretty fair column rate in telegrams and cables asking for his work. Nor were the papers alone blind to him at start. It was his lot to be rejected by very big magazines. This was, I fear, true of the magazine which is, of all others, the quickest to recognize new merit—the Century. Sketches of his life mention that he once held a place in the office of the Century, which he left or lost—which? It would be interesting to know of the hap which separated the most brilliant prose writer of his day from the most enterprising of magazines. His plans for the winter are still indefinite. Open air is the prescription of his physicians, and since his return from Newport Mr. Stevenson has been in the Adirondacks, to find some place in which outdoor life and comfort can be combined.

The Veteran Clown.

From the Nebraska State Journal.

I wandered to the circus, Tom, I sat beneath the tent, I saw the human serpent in his wild contortions bent; I saw the clown who roamed around with eyes that streamed in woe—he sprung the same old gags he used some twenty years ago. The living skeleton was there who weighed some forty pounds, the royal Bengal tigers crouched and uttered doleful sounds; Circassian girls who came from Cork and let their tresses grow, and sold their photos just the same as twenty years ago. Then spavined horses galloped round the beaten sawdust tracks, and spavined riders changed their clothes while standing on their backs; the horses made as big a splurge and traveled just as slow, as in the shows we used to see some twenty years ago. The girl who fooled with sleepy snakes, the girl with snowy hair, the spotted men, and women fat and giants tall were there; the hungry lion walked his cage and tried to look as though, he hadn't done the same old thing some twenty years ago. Some warlike braves came out and howled a battle song,—they sang so bad I feebly reached and struck my chestnut gong—and then they chased some cowboys 'round, as per the wild west show, and charged the same old coach they charged some twenty years ago. I've sworn off on the circus, Tom, I've made a solemn vow that death shall press his clammy hand upon my marble brow before to any circus tent this form of mine shall go, to hear the chestnuts that I heard some twenty years ago. I've sworn off on the human snake, the sad, heartrending clown, the salamander chewing fire, the dwarf in greasy gown, the man who walks the slackened wire, while supers cheer below, and all the other snaps I knew some twenty years ago.

RAILROAD NEWS.

The London Statist notes as a result of the reduction in freights via the Mexican Central that Liverpool merchants are doing a brisk business with Mexico by way of New Orleans.

The Burlington road is about to open two more Nebraska feeders to its main line. These branches traverse territory north of the Platte, which the Union Pacific has neglected to annex.

California trade with Texas is daily assuming more important proportions. The Southern Pacific is making special tariffs to large distributing points on the sunset route. The consequence of which is that a first-class trade in California products is being built up.

President Stickney, of the Minnesota & Northwestern, has stated that his line would reduce the rate on mileage tickets to 2 cents a mile only on 2,000 mile tickets, instead of 1,000 mile tickets as at first proposed. It was demonstrated clearly that the latter would force down the regular rates between Chicago and St. Paul, which the Minnesota & Northwestern was not prepared to do, hence the determination to confine the reduction to 2,000 miles.

DRAMATIC DRIFT.

There is a vague, faint rumor that the Thurbers are again behind the new National Opera company that Mr. Locke is to manage.

Danville (Va.) Breeze: Owners of opera houses will shudder when they read that Virginia's peanut crop is 1,600,000 bushels this year.

Francisque Sarcey, the most noted of French dramatic critics, has written a play at the age of 50 odd. He calls it "The Country House."

Mme. Janauschek will not be able to play for a long time to come. Her accident in Newport last spring has proved a greater drawback than was anticipated.

Miss Adelaide Moore, who is now in Paris, returns to this country next season, when she will be seen in a new play that is being written for her by a famous dramatist.

Mrs. Emma Skerrett, a formerly popular stock actress in Philadelphia, is dead. The remains were interred in the lot of the Actor's Fund, at Evergreen Cemetery, Long Island.

Tourists should take along a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. Keep it handy.

ROUGH ON ROACHES.

Some Suggestions as to the Best Way of Killing Them.

With all his manifold vices it is pleasant to know that the roach is not altogether bad, says a New York Sun writer. There yet remains in the breast of even the fattest and ugliest roach, that ever spoiled a custard pie, one sentiment sprung the heaven-born heart of those fiery swords from which his race is descended. Though innumerable damaged dinners, ruined luncheons without end, and an uncounted hosts of breakfast made odious by his unwelcome presence be charged up against him; though many firesides have been desolated by him and numberless pantries laid waste, yet, let there, in justice, be set against his name one legend of righteousness—the roach eats bedbugs.

Many things eat roaches. Birds and all insectivorous animals are especially fond of them. Hedgehogs dote on them. In England hedgehogs are sometimes kept in kitchens on purpose to devour the roaches. It is also said that in the Isle of France there exists a kind of sand wasp that preys upon roaches. It is the custom of this wasp to prowl around until it sees a roach; then it stops and both insects eye each other intently for a moment. In an instant the wasp springs forward, seizes the roach by the muzzle with its strong jaws, and, bending its abdomen underneath, pierces the roach with its fatal sting. Then the wasp lets go and walks away to rest a bit. The roach after meditating a while upon its sinful career, feeling the poison reach its heart, lies down and dies. Presently the wasp comes back, finds the roach beyond resistance, and, seizing it again by the head, drags it away and puts it in a hole or chick in wall.

A still more remarkable story of how some roaches met their death is vouched for by Wood, the English writer on insects. He says that some thirty years ago there were two young ladies, sisters, who came from Jamaica to London to school. After everyone but themselves was asleep, they used to get up, quietly slip down to the kitchen, and there catch and eat the roaches. This extraordinary habit was not detected for some time, but at last the mistress found it out and remonstrated with them. They, however, defended themselves by saying that they had seen her eat shrimps, which fed on all manner of carron, while the roaches were clean feeders, living on the crumbs which had been left to lie around the kitchen. Even after this discovery it was almost impossible to keep them out of the kitchen at night, so strong was their love of the roaches.

An ingenius method of luring them to death is practiced in England, where a soup plate filled with stale beer is set on the floor, with little bits of stick leaning against the side all around. The roaches walk up the stick, get drunk on the beer, fall in and are drowned by by the hundred, it is said.

But, after all, for a real, downright, soul-satisfying death to roaches, nothing equals the system invented several years ago by a newspaper man, and which has attained extended vogue in the profession. It isn't as wholesome as some other method, but there is an element of poetic justice in it that is balm for the soul harrowed by the discovery of a colony of bugs in the place where the paste is supposed to be. The scheme is to impale the bug on a pin and roast him in the gas jet. This course of treatment is guaranteed to cure every bug to which it is applied.

Poison On the Walls.

From the New York Mail.

"Do you mean to say that you used that paper on your bedroom walls?"

"Yes, doctor."

"Well, I can hardly pity you. A man ought to know enough not to use such a cheap grade of green paper, especially on the walls of his sleeping rooms."

"My wife bought it," explained the man.

"Well," returned the doctor, "you will know better next time. It is extremely fortunate that none of your family died from the poison."

"This man," remarked the doctor, who is Dr. E. L. Fendler, a well known analytical chemist of upper Broadway, to a Mail and Express reporter when the customer had left his laboratory, "brought some cheap green wall paper to me for analysis. It had made himself and his family ill. I found that the carpet of the room was permeated with the dust of arsenite of copper. There was one-quarter of 1 per cent of this poison in the piece of carpet I examined. The air must have been full of the dust, which is so fine as to be almost invisible. It is a wonder that no one in the house died from the effects of the poison."

"All green paper is not poisonous?"

"No; but there is hardly a variety of wall-paper, whatever its color may be, that does not contain arsenite of copper, which is poisonous. But when wall-paper is skillfully made there is no danger of poison. It is only those kinds that are so carelessly prepared that a dust which is composed principally of this poison falls off, fills the air and the carpet, to be inhaled by those who live in the room. It is not alone the low priced paper which is dangerous; often the most costly kinds have this fault. Very few cases, however, are reported, and the danger is not so widespread as some persons may imagine."

Shelley and Harriett Westbrook.

From Macmillan's Magazine.

Shelley behaved exceeding ill to Harriett Westbrook. Nobody can deny that; he didn't himself. He undoubtedly suffered remorse for his conduct, in spite of a sentence or two of bravado; and he felt himself to have been, as he undoubtedly was, the cause of the unhappy girl's ultimate suicide. Well, what more, in the nature of common sense and common decency, is to be made of the story? Suppose Harriett, though "beautiful, amiable, good, accommodating and affectionate," was "also—deadly and at last unevadable discovery—commonplace?" Suppose it is the fact, that, as Shelley himself said, the partner of his life ought to have been one who could "feel poetry and understand philosophy," and that Harriet, "though a noble animal, could do neither?" Suppose that Shelley, to quote a delicious sentence of Mr. W. M. Rossetti's, "must, no doubt, have regarded the latter career" of the forlorn and deserted woman as "marked by great want of self-respect, and may have both felt and expressed himself strongly now and again without derogating from the substantial rectitude and tenderness of his nature"—still, what then? Is it, therefore, worth while to give us endless "studies" and biographies full of solemn disquisition on these threadbare scandals?

A Clever Thing.

Fun.

"I was getting measured for a suit of clothes this mawning," said young Mr. Sissy to his pretty cousin, "and just for a joke, y' know, I awsked Snipen if it weally took nine tailors to make a man. He said that it would take more than nine tailors to make a man of some people. I thought it was quite clevah."

"Yes, it was clever, Charley," said his pretty cousin.

KANSAS NOTES.

The city engineer of Topeka gets $2,000 a year.

The wonderful town of Horton has two daily papers now.

Reno county is building a substantial jail at Hutchinson.

George Francis Train is billed to speak at Topeka October 26.

Santa Fe has been chosen to be permanent county seat of Haskell county.

Newton has voted to subscribe for $5,000 worth of the stock of a company whose purpose is to bore for gas.

Secretary Adams, of the State Historical society, is preparing a book on the result of the first election in Kansas at which women voted.

The city council of Lawrence has imposed an occupation tax on all farmers who sell their products in the city. The farmers propose to boycott the town. The farmers will have the best of the fight.

The Newton Republican coolly spoils the romance of the Cowboy band by stating that one of its members blows the alto horn in the Presbyterian church of Newton and is not a cowboy nor ever was.

The county of Washington in this state, which for a long time had the meanest court house in the state of Kansas, with the possible exception of Wilson, now boasts the best, and further, the edifice was paid for before it was completed.

LABOR ITEMS.

A Portland (Me.) shoe manufacturer said recently: By running a double set of machinery and crowding the machines, our crew of 100 men make 600 pairs of shoes in a day, or one pair of shoes per minute. That is six pairs of shoes to the man.

Some of the labor papers of New York are as vigorous as any "capitalistic sheet" could well be in opposing the George-McGlynn movement. The Labor Union (New York) quotes this from a speech of Dr. McGlynn: "I would bring about instantly, if I could, such change of laws all the world over as would confiscate private property in land, without one penny of compensation to the miscalled owners."

On the Pacific coast the Seamen's Union has just secured a new schedule of sailors' wages on coasting, lumber and coal vessels, $5 a month higher than the old rates, and the highest, it is stated, ever paid. The rates are to be, during the winter, $50 a month to open ports, $15 to bar harbors, and $40 to the islands. On steamers, men are being paid $50 and $55 per month, with the addition of 50 cents an hour for over time, and $3 for Sundays.

HOW EASY IT IS.

How easy it is to spoil a day!
The thoughtless words of cherished friends,
The selfish act of a child at play,
The strength of will that will not bend.
The slight of a comrade, the scorn of a foe,
The smile that is full of bitter things—
They all can tarnish its golden glow
And take the grace from its airy wings.

How easy it is to spoil a day
By the force of a thought we did not check.
Little by little we mould the clay,
And little flaws may the vessel wreck.
The careless waste of a white-winged hour.
That held the blessings we long had sought,
The sudden loss of wealth or power—
And lo the day is with ill inwrought.

How easy it is to spoil a life—
And many are spoiled ere well begun—
In some life darkened by sin and strife,
Or downward course of a cherished one,
By toil that robs the form of its grace
By the peevish temper, the frowning face,
The hopes that go and the cares that stay.

A day too short to be spent in vain;
Some good should come as the hours go by—
Some tangled maze may be made more plain,
Some lowered glance may be raised on high,
And life is too short to spoil like this,
If only a prelude it may be sweet;
Let us bind together its threads of bliss
And nourish the flowers around our feet.

COLOR AND CITIZENSHIP.

A Judge Decides That a Negro is Prima Facie an American Citizen.

From the Pittsburg Dispatch.

Judge White yesterday made a decision which will be of considerable interest to the colored population of this country. It is in effect that a colored man's countenance is prima facie evidence that he was born in this country and is therefore a citizen of the United States.

The question arose in the case of Martin Sullivan, a Democrat, who is register assessor of the Third district of the Twelfth Ward, and who is charged with omitting from his list the names of a number of voters of the district, four-fifths of the neglected ones being colored men. James F. Robb, Esq., appeared for the Republicans and W. J. Brennan, Esq., for the assessor.

Officer Brown, colored, was upon the witness stand, and was asked if he knew Benjamin Lemons of Spring Alley, whose name was omitted from the assessor's list. Brown said he had known Lemons for a number of years, whereupon Mr. Brennan asked the witness if he knew whether Lemons was a citizen.

Judge White interposed, saying: "I presume Lemons is a colored man, and therefore must be a citizen."

"He may not have been born in this country," suggested Mr. Brennan.

"Well, Mr. Brennan," rejoined the judge, "I have never yet met a colored man who was not born in this country."

"Your Honor, said Mr. Brennan, "there is a colored man named Sims now living in the Third district of the Twelfth ward who was born in England."

Judge White replied: "The presumption is is that a colored man is of American birth, and therefore a citizen, and it is the duty of the election board to dispute his vote if they have any evidence to the contrary."

Some further evidence was taken, and Assessor Sullivan was ordered to make out a list of voters which would be satifactory to both sides and bring it into court for confirmation.

"Got There Just the Same."

United States Senator Sawyer, of Wisconsin, is one of the wags of the most august assembly in the republic. He relates that soon after Mr. Lincoln was nominated for the presidency, in 1860, it became pretty well understood that David Davis was really responsible for the event which subsequently became so big with political results. When Davis and Lincoln next met, the latter said he had heard that Davis had done a good deal in the way of manipulating state delegations in his (Lincoln's) behalf; "and I am afraid, Mr. Davis," he added, with a characteristic twinkle—"I'm afraid you equivocated a little."

"Equivocated!" roared the rotund Davis. "I lied like the devil."

Said Senator Sawyer, laughing heartily at the reminiscence, "I once asked Davis if he really said that.

"Well, was the reply, "if I didn't, I got there just the same."

Mr. H. Mr. Brace had the honor of receiving the following reply in Mrs. Cleveland's own handwriting:

COATES HOUSE, Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 13.
H. C. Brace, Wyandotte, Kas.

Bullene, Moore, Emery & Co.

TO-MORROW: Warmer, fair weather, except cooler in Nebraska; light to fresh southerly winds.

Cool weather beginning to assert its right.

Chilly nights suggest blankets and comforts. And doesn't the store come into your thoughts when you think of these?

You don't see the immensity of the stock when you look at the few hundreds of Blankets and Comforts in the retail. What you see there is merely a sample line of the thousands stacked and piled in the wholesale. Our cheapest Blanket, 98c pair. The best, $35 pair. The first, all cotton and not worthy of the name, but still it has its place to fill.

Between these two limits—98c and $35—we have Blankets of all prices, grades, styles, colors and descriptions; but the most popular one and the one that we sell to the greater part of the masses who annually come here for Blankets, is the $5 pair. Strictly all wool warp and filling in white, grey or scarlet; full size with plenty to tuck under. Good and warm and just the thing for these cool nights.

Last season we sold a certain 7-pound Blanket for $7.50 pair. This year, however, we bought in such enormous quantities that the cost was lowered and now we are offering the same thing for $5 a pair. These are all brown.

California Blankets $7.50, $9, $10, $12.50, $15, $16.50, $19.50, $22.50 and $35. You know that the wool grown in California is the finest, and at the Centennial, 1876, the California Blankets took the premium over the world.

In three of the display windows you'll notice an assortment of Wrapper Blankets and among them a wrapper made up of one of these blankets. They come in blue, and gold, red and grey, red and navy, grey and blue, pink and tan, navy and tan, grey and white, navy and old gold stripes and polka dots. This season's price $5; last year they were twice as much.

Blankets; blankets, blankets, grey, scarlet, navy, white, brown, blue mixed, scarlet mixed; all wool blankets, all cotton blankets, camel's hair, cotton and wool blankets and wool and cotton blankets.

Comforts from 50c to $4.75 apiece. Those from $7.50 up are filled with Down and the finest ones filled with silk and satin and ornamented with fancy floral designs.

The most popular Comfort we have is the $2.50 one. Good, heavy and warm. with a filling of corded cotton; deserving of the name. Nothing better for substantial use.

The finest corded cotton Comforts, $5 to $7.50.

A vast difference whether a Comfort is filled with down or cotton. In a down Comfort you have more warmth and less than half the weight of a cotton comfort.

Some of our customers who have used them for several winters tell us that one down Comfort is as warm as two pair of Blankets!

Two toned Corduroys, a new taking effect and very popular. Also a complete assortment in the heavy cords.

CLAIRVOYANT — $10,000 CHALLENGE — ALL call on Mme. Frances, the great and noted Clairvoyant and Astrologist, the most powerful mystic sight in Clairvoyance of the nineteenth century; born with a three-fold veil, has been publicly tested and challenges the world. Ten thousand dollars challenge to any one who can equal her in consultation on dead and living friends or enemies; on business matters, marriages and losses of every description. Reveals mysteries, discovers hidden coin or minerals, locates lingering diseases. Mme. Frances is the greatest living natural Clairvoyant on earth. She reads your secret and open life from the cradle to the grave with as much ease as though an ordinary conversation; asks no questions, uses no cards of any description in her profession, gives the charm of the ancient talisman for luck, breaking evil influence, witchcraft, causing those who forsake you to return. Ladies in trouble call. Office hours from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. 199 James street, above the store, Kansas City, Kas., Fifth st. Kansas City and Wyandotte cars pass the door.

THE GREAT MAGIC SALVE.

Mme. Frances' Magic Salve will positively cure tumors, ulcers, cancers, paralyzed limbs, queer spells, scrofula, catarrh, spine disease, pimples, felons, piles, proud flesh, sore eyes, deafness, lameness through rheumatism, or any other effected disease. When you have become discouraged in using every art of medical remedies. then try the Magic Salve. Ten thousand dollar challenge to any remedy with equal successful and immediate cure. Prepared and sold only by Mme. Frances, No. 199 James st., (above the store) Kansas City, Kas. Consultation and orders sent by mail.

Hear what the Evansville Bulletin says: Mme. Frances' Magic Salve is an extraordinary cure. Make the best of it. Hearing of a wonderful cure said to have been done to a lady by the name of Mrs. Moxley, residing on Bell street, now on Mulberry, near Eighth street, the reporter called on Mrs. Moxley to investigate the case, she having been unable to get in or out of bed without assistance, her right arm for over six months was swollen with inflammatory causes. After trying several physicians without relief, it was decided to take the arm off to save life, when last of all Mrs. Moxley concluded to try Mme. Frances' Magic Salve, and was completely cured in one week. Many such cases can be testified to in Evansville and St. Louis, where Mme. Frances had patronage. 24

THE UBIQUITOUS JEW.

His Adaptability to All Climates and Conditions.

From the Jewish World.

It has been frequently remarked that the Jewish race has a wonderful power of adapiation to all climates. Jews are found in all parts of the globe, and seem to possess a remarkable facility for acclimatization, even under the most unfavorable circumstances. Mesopotamia is considered the mother country of the Abrahamic family, as well as the cradle of the human race. Some years ago a small colony of Jews were found in the ancient city of Sennar, in the south of Mesopotamia, and in the vicinity of ancient Babylon. Of the seventy families composing the colony, one claimed to be descended from King Joachim, the rest from the house of Levi. A colony of Jews appear to have settled in China about the beginning of the third century of the Christian area, under the Gynasty of Han. In 1704, Father Gon zani, a Roman Catholic missionary, found seven Jewish familis near Pekin.

In 1688 a Portuguese Jew of Amsterdam, named De Pavia, discovered a sect of Jews in Chochin China. According to a tradition preserved among them, they were descended from a tribe of Jews who had quitted Palestine on the destruction of the second temple. From their long residence in Cochin they had become completely bronzed. These are not the same as the Malabar Jews. The Jewish traveler Benjamin, sometimes called Benjamin II, discovered a colony of Jews, evidently of Persian origin, in Hindoostan. They were known as "Babylonian Jews," on account of their having migrated from Babylonia. They observed the essential rites of Judaism, and strictly avoided intermarriage with other sects. In the beginning of the seventeenth century a Jewish colony settled in Cayenne, in the West Indies, one of the most inhospitable climates in South America.

Cayenne was subsequently conquered by the French, who made it a penal settlement, and the Jewish colony was forced to retire to Surinam. Notwithstanning the frequent persecutions, Jews are still found in Persia, more especially to the south of the Caspian Sea, where the soil is very fertile but the climate very unhealthy. The principal city is Balprosh, where about 150 Jewish families reside in almost complete isolation. They trade with their brethren in Great Tartary, and are engaged in the wool and silk trade or in the sale of citrons. They, too, trace their origin from the Babylonian captivity, for according to a tradition still possessed among them, their ancestors settled in Persia and in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, and did not respond to the appeal of Ezra to return to Palestine. Their mode of life resembles that of the Persians in general. They [illegible] beard in high esteem, and wear [illegible] stock[illegible]bes. They have several synagogues [illegible] scrolls of the law from [illegible] celebrated African traveler, [illegible]ark, found a colony of Jewish families [illegible] the heart of Africa, about 800 miles from the coast. It is no doubt this peculiarity of the Jewish race which induced a French writer on "Medical Geography" to express the opinion that: "It is questionable whether the crossing of human varieties confers on the issue constant advantages in relation to the species; for the Jewish race seems in a wonderful manner capable of adapting itself to every change of climate, while others are scarcely able to bear the least change."

The Jew is found in every part of the world; in Europe, from Norway to Gibralter; in Africa, from Algiers to the Cape of Good Hope; in Asia, from Cochin to the Caucasus; from Jaffa to Pekin. He has peopled Australia, and has given proofs of his powers of acclimation under the tropics, where people of European origin have constantly failed to perpetuate themselves.

"A VISION OF LOVE."

The Sort of Picture Britishers Like to Gaze Upon.

The purity of the art appreciation exhibited by the British public can be no better illustrated than by giving a story of a picture now on exhibition in New Bond street, writes Crawford to the New York World. This picture is the work of an Italian artist who is noted for his skill as a painter, and the cunning employed by him in the suggesting what is forbidden public exhibition under the penalty of a severe punishment.

This painter produced two or three years ago a picture called "Nana," the heroine of Zola's novel. Everything described by Zola as characteristic of Nana was suggested in this picture. Her face was that of a wanton aflame with passion posing in an attitude of abandon. It was a [illegible] figure. There was not a line in it to [illegible] Mr. Comstock could have objected, and the result was a picture of great indecency through its suggestiveness. It was, however, [illegible] all through England, under strong [illegible] at night and in darkened rooms in the [illegible]. I am told by one of the associates of this artist that this picture netted the painter [illegible]00,000 in its two years' exhibition.

The picture which I have referred to at the outset of this paragraph, which is now in New Bond street, is called "A Vision of Love." The price charged for admission to view it is 1 shilling. The picture is surrounded by heavy draperies, and is at the back of a deep alcove. From the opposite side of the room is a great mirror which reflects the picture in such a way that it looks absolutely like life. The figure is life size, and represents a dark-haired, swarthy-complexioned woman in a white night-robe curled down upon a pile of rich colored rugs.

The figure is only partially concealed by the white dress. The woman is represented as just waking, and the look which is painted upon this face is not one which is found upon the average Madonna. The great skill and undaunted talents of the artist has been exhausted to its full in this degrading example of art. The picture is painted so as to appeal to the public who care nothing for pictures, and, according to [illegible] efforts, it has been very successful. [illegible] figured, deep-voiced, swarthy, suave-mannered [illegible], who had charge of the room, told me that during the last year—this picture having been exhibited since last January—they had received £15,000. The cost involved in the exhibition of such a picture is merely the rent of the room and a small salary paid to one or two attendants.

THE CELESTIAL AND THE CELT.

A Little Conflict of Nationalities in California.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

The procession of the dragon and the mighty joss of the Yeong Wo company caused all work to be suspended for a week in Wong Fat's washhouse. The boss was resting himself at he door yesterday after playing the part of the sixty-fifth leg of the dragon, when Mr. Maloney arrived with an invoice of underwear that needed more than a speaking acquaintance with the washtub.

"You see him dlagon—O, velly fine, velly fine," remarked the laundryman.

Mr. Maloney nodded but answered not.

"Cost Chinamen heep money—one, two, 20,000 dollar. O, no!—cost million. O, mo! me tink two million. Nobody catch him show like Chinaman. Melican man show no good; Ilishman show too much talkee—no big dlagon—no gong; alle bum-bum-bum music; bum-bum-bum man."

Mr. Maloney glared in speechless astonishment at the boastful Mongolian.

"Holy St. Patrick!" he gasped as soon as he found his voice, "am I dhraming—am I awake? Have I lived to hear a fish-eyed haythen from Hongkong set himself up as the equal of a white man in this free country?"

"Chinamen boss," remarked Wong Fat with exasperating calmness.

Mr Maloney writhed for several minutes in a paroxysm.

"Do you mane to assert," he demanded, his voice hoarse with patriotic rage, "that you think because you had a couple of pasteboard dragons that cost a few hundred dollars and a dozen av young haythins painted as fairies that you're going to sit yerselves up as a model in this counthry?"

"Chinaman boss," remarked Wong Fat.

"Chinaman be——," roared the exasperated patriot, "why, you addle-headed apology for a washing machine, I could show you more shnakes, dragons, and imps of the Devel in Ireland for the price of three glasses of Cork whisky than you could manufacture in China from now to doomsday."

So saying the justly enraged citizen seized his bundle of washing and took his trade away at top speed, carrying a section of the door-panel with him in his excitement.

Where Masculine Beauty is Worshipped.

From Town Topics.

Mr. Robert McDonald, a Harvard senior, who is stopping at Rodick's, is the attraction to all the impressionable girls at Bar Harbor. They compare him to Montague, George Rignold, Osmond Tearle, and all the other male beauties of the mimic scene, and fairly rave about his good looks. Girls and older women who ought to know better from the cottages and hotels hang about the Rodick piazzas for hours to get a glance at him, while he, with uncommon fortitude, acts as if he were entirely unaware of all the adoration lavished upon him.

The Essential Elements.

From Puck.

Wife—What are most of the requirements necessary to make a successful poker player, my dear?

Husband (thoughtfully)—Well, a man must be cool, calculating, crafty, deceitful, selfish, sly, and have a touch of meanness in his disposition.

Wife (shocked)—I shouldn't think you would care to play with such people.

Husband—Oh, I most always win.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE

IN GENERAL DEBILITY.

Dr. E. W. Hill, Glens Falls, N. Y., says: "I have used it in cases of nervous and general debility, and always with success. I consider it an excellent remedy for a tonic, dyspepsia, or any low state of the system."

THE USE OF HEARTY FOODS.

Why Wood-Coopers Demand Salt Pork in Place of Fresh Meat.

I never could make out exactly what were "hearty" foods and in just what their heartiness consisted, says Professor Atwater in the Century. It has since occurred to me that these words express one of the ideas which the unerring sense and instinct of man have wrought out of his long experience, but have waited for science to put into clear and definite form. The synonym with which our science defines this idea is energy. Hearty foods are those in which there is an abundance of potential energy.

The lumbermen in the Maine forests work intensely in the cold and snows of winter and in the icy water in the spring. To endure the severe labor and cold they must have food to yield a great deal of heat and strength. Beans and fat pork are staple articles of diet with them, and are used in very large quantities. The beans supply proteine to make up for the wear and tear of muscle, and they, and more especially the pork, are very rich in energy to be used for warmth and work.

I cannot vouch for the following. which has just struck my eyes in a daily paper, but, if it is true, the workmen were sound in their physiology.

A lot of woodchoppers who worked for Mr. S——, in H——, stopped work the other day and sent a spokesman to their employer, who said that the men were satisfied with their wages and most other things, but didn't like "your fresh meat; that's too fancy, and hain't got strength into it." Mr. S—— gave them salt pork three times a day and peace at once resumed its sway.

The use of oily and fatty foods in arctic regions is explained by the great potential energy of fat, a pound of which is equal to over two pounds of proteine or starch. I have been greatly surprised to see, on looking into the matter, how commonly and largely the fatter kinds of meat are used by men engaged in very hard labor. Men in training for athletic contests, as oarsmen and football teams, eat large quantites of meat. I have often queried why so much fat beef is used, and especially why mutton is often recommended in preference to beef for training diet. Both the beef and the mutton are rich in proteine, which makes muscle. Mutton has the advantage of containing more fat along with the proteine, and hence more potential energy. Perhaps this is another case in which experience has led to practice, the real grounds for which have later been explained by scientific research.

MEN OF GENIUS.

They, Too, Long for What is Far Beyond Their Reach.

From the Gentleman's Magazine.

So far from being narrow the man of genius must, one should say, be broad in the range of his conception, and if not in that, of his execution. There is a sense, indeed, in which every artist would be the gainer by becoming universal. Thus the poet and the painter may each profit from a full and exact study of the facts of natural science. But then the artistic benefit depends on the subject being studied not as a savant would study it, merely for the sake of precise knowledge, but for the sake of the poetical or pictorical aspects, relations and suggestions which the facts present. So true is this that one is hardly going too far in laying it down as a canon that a painter ought not to be a good reasoner on the causes of natural phenomena, and that a painter ought not to be an authority in the realm, say, of purely historical and ethical discussion.

The lives of great men have often shown us a strange and perverse inclination to break through the bonds or their proper domain. More than one man of undoubted genius has, it is averred, expressed regret that he had not attained distinction in some other line than his own. Wolfe, when actually engaged in his last crowning feat of generalship, is said to have declared that he would rather have written Gray's "Elegy." Goethe, not satisfied to be the greatest of German poets, was ambitious to become a savant as well.

Such facts appear at first sight to contradict our theory that superlative performance of any kind implies a corresponding concentration of impulse. Yet the contradiction is only apparent. We may be sure that Wolfe—who, by the by, became a soldier soon after he was 13—was, on the whole, more passionately desirous of military than of poetic distinction, just as we know that in Goethe the poetic impulse was the most potent and permanent. Such occasional roving ambitions may mean nothing more than that the great men, like the small one, is apt to over estimate what lies beyond his reach, or, perhaps, that he more than common men, is aware of the limitations that hem him in, and is now and again disposed to rebel against them.

Miss Braddon at Home.

London Letter to Washington Post.

The queen of the English literary world, in respect of fortune, is Miss Braddon, whose pen has yielded her magnificent sums and still continues to earn for her a splendid fortune. I have attended her garden parties at Lichfield House, Richmond, this season, at which a pleasant assemblage, the creme de la creme of literary and artistic life, is gathered every Sunday. I fear I must confess my impression that much of the Braddon fortune is due to the clever management of her husband, Mr. Maxwell, whose devotion to her interests is a thing beautiful to see. He is a tall, genial Scotchman, who finds no topics of conversation more absorbing than those of the work and the rewards of his gifted wife. "Lady Audley's Secret" was and is Miss Braddon's "banner" novel. Its first run brought in no less a sum than $60,000, and, though published twenty years ago, it still keeps selling. With this money she purchased Lichfield House, a fine old mansion standing in large grounds at Richmond, London's loveliest suburb. Nothing but a detailed description would convey any idea of the charm of this old house, "full of history and mystery," as Miss Braddon says. Wide staircases, large and small drawing rooms, quaint nooks and crannies, cause it to fall well within the domain of the numberless manses which Miss Braddon has described in her many interesting romances. It is furnished with just the sort of articles one would expect to see there—quaint and beautiful chairs and sofas of the ancient models, exquisite China, many paintins of value, including two very interesting ones, the first a portrait of this now celebrated authoress, then a girl of exceeding loveliness, resting her head upon tho shoulder of her mother; the second another portrait of herself, a quiet and handsome lady of twenty-five or thirty, which was taken at the time she made her great success with "Lady Audley." No photographs of Miss Braddon are to be bought. Mr. Maxwell says he desires "to save her any annoyence from her fame;" and there is no doubt that much-photographed people are greatly stared at in public. Miss Braddon is fair and broad-shouldered, but not stout, her constant harseback exercise keeping down any excess of tissue; she has pleasant features, light brown eyes, hair without much trace of gray, and dresses handsomely, sometimes wearing very beautiful diamonds. Lichfield House is not Miss Braddon's only residence. During part of the year she dwells in a charming villa in the New Forest, a romantic wood which, though called "New" is as old at least as Shakespeare's day, mention being made of its sweet dales and groves in the words of the master. Miss Braddon's novels are published by John and Robert Maxwell, sons of Mr. Maxwell. It is this firm which had the good fortune to bring out the works of Mr. Rider Haggard, whose "King Solomon's Mines" may perchance prove a second "Lady Audley's Secret" as regares financial value.

How the Stage Pays.

In an article on stage women and their earnings in Lippincott's Magazine, an actress says that her profession is the only one which offers a woman anything like adequate remuneration. "Even in the lowest ranks of stage work the pay is sufficient to live on comfortably and allow a margin for dress and saving. A chorus singer will earn $15 a week, where a governess will earn barely $4 and a shop-girl $6 or $8. On the stage a girl or young woman has the hope of getting or making a fortune; and, above all, she finds herself among people who are willing to receive her with open arms if she is pleasant. Here are no restrictions of purse or caste. All are brothers and sisters, and it lies with her and her alone whether her new family shall respect and look up to her or pass her down sadly to those poor silly ones who have missed the nobility of their aim and sacrificed all for a short life of foolish merriment. No wonder that poor girls of the better classes go on the stage when they see how much is to be done there, and then regard dispassionately the few other modes of earning a livelihood.

Shakespeare-Bacon.

From the New York World.

There is a tendency shown by many newspapers in the country to ridicule the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy. This is not as it should be. Never, perhaps, in the history of literature has so important a question of authorship been raised. "Shakespeare's plays" are the highest triumph of English literary genius, and the credit for their production should be placed where it belongs. As yet the claim of Bacon to their authorship is by no means established, but that William Shakespeare wrote them is becoming constantly more doubtful. Until the present status of the subject is materially changed he is a flippant man who throws aside the question at issue with a joke. Certainly it will be a triumph for our generation if it is finally proved that, after some centuries of misplaced credulity, men should, in all justice, throw aside forever exalted opinion regarding Shakespeare's ability.

Gents' Furnishings Until 9 To-Night.

It Doesn't Take Much Paper to Figure the Cost.

There are no Flies on Them.

We keep the Gents' Furnishing Goods department open until 9 p. m. every Saturday for the convenience of its patrons. There's a special sale, too, in this department every Saturday. Prices are right there, as they are in all of the departments every day in the week, but we can afford to make some very deep cuts one day in every week, especially in a collateral line like Gents' Furnishings. Some of the bargains we offer to-day are these:

Scarlet Underwear, all wool, at 95c, to-day only.

Fine Camel's Hair Half Hose, 3 pairs for $1.

Heavy Seamless Half Hose, 3 pairs for 50c.

A large assortment of 50c Neckties for 25c each.

Unlaundried Shirts at 50c, 75c and $1; none better and few so good at the prices.

Laundried Shirts at $1 and $1.25 that are as correct in every detail as any for which a higher price is asked at some other places. Whenever you pay more for a shirt than the price of material, a decent allowance for making and a small profit you pay too much. It does not take much paper to figure the cost of some things. We have the best Linen Collars and Cuffs in town at 10 and 15 cents, so far as we have compared. They are good, but the E. & W. are a good deal better, and much of our trade will have no other but the E. & W. "There are no flies on them."

LADIES' HOSIERY, ETC.

Fine Cashmere Hose, all wool, regular made, at 25, 35 and 50 cents.

English Cashmere Hose at 50c, worth 75c, and a line at 65c proportionately cheap.

Ladies' fine Merino Underwear at 50c.

Ladies' Camel's Hair Underwear at 95c.

Ladies' Jersey fitting Vests, long sleeves, at $1.00; short sleeves at 85c.

Ladies' silk and wool Undersuits in all of the refined and delicate shades. They are expensive but elegant and radically new.

A new line of Moquette and other Carpets at lower prices than if we dealt in Carpets alone. Some of the patterns in Moquettes and Wiltons will interest you if you are not too much in love with art to trample it under foot; but, then, that's what Carpets are made for.

Another Blanket Sale here just for a change. This time it includes some of the finest Blankets that were ever tucked in to shut out the cold. The reductions really look too striking to be genuine, but they are and they are a necessity, because there isn't a sufficient demand for the very expensive Blankets.

"SUNNYSIDE" AT INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

This beautiful addition has just been platted and graded, and its lots (generally 50 feet front) offered for sale. I have placed them at such prices as will enable the Poor Man to Make a Home. Get away from the dust, smoke, din and high prices of the great city and make you a place "to live," a Home, a "Sunnyside" retreat. $10, $12.50 or $15 per foot will secure you as fine a lot as lies out doors anywhere, two to six feet above the street grade and on the Citizens' street railway. Remember, this property lies against the corporate limits of the City of Independence. "It is not "country" property! It is but a short walk to the court house square and a few blocks to any of its educational institutions. Independence is a city of fine schools, pure water, splendid society, and very healthful. Its altitude is 300 feet above Kansas City. For once the best goods are offered you at half price! Do not throw this aside as unworthy of a thought, but read it carefully and conclude to see for yourself "if these things be true," then come to my office and look at the plat and select a home. $100 will secure you a lot for 30 days, then so much more as will make one-third payment, and balance will be secured upon the property. Now is your time! If you have no money and wish to build, I will sell you a lot at a slightly higher figure and wait till you make a builder's loan, for the first payment.
